Hot-rod riots rock Bathurst

BATHURST, N.B. (CP) — A three-ring circus of drag racing, stunt driving and drinking has turned this city into a shambles of broken glass and smoldering debris as a strike by the city's 26 policemen entered its sixth day today.

After a hot, muggy night of vandalism and mischief in downtown streets, city and union spokesmen today warned the rowdiness will get worse unless contracts are signed by the policemen and 87 blue-collar employees of the city also on strike.

Several hundred people in this community of 15,000 cheered and tossed beer bottles Monday night as daredevil drivers raced down main streets and rowdies set fires, destroyed phone booths, started fights and urinated in the streets.

Police held fast to their vow not to break their picket lines Monday night to keep the peace, as they had done twice since the strike began.

However, early today a patrol car carrying four striking policemen escorted an ambulance downtown to help a young woman who apparently passed out.

The cheering crowd of about 2,000, most of them young, pelted the police car and ambulance with bottles when they pulled up to help the woman.

"There is no way the people of Bathurst will let vandals ruin their city," Mayor John Duffy said today. "The people are hostile and fed up.

"I don't think these people will take the law into their own hands, I know they will."

Many of the people who watched the fray Monday night said that what started out as fun on the weekend has turned ugly and dangerous.

One woman, who refused to give her name for fear of reprisals, said she was ashamed to admit Bathurst was her home.

The outside workers and the police, represented by CUPE Local 1497, have said they will support each other and remain off the job until both contracts are signed with the city.

One of the cars in the street racing early today caught fire, the flames spreading to spilled oil and gas and threatening a service station for a time. There were no injuries.

The service station had been closed earlier because people were gassing up and not paying.

Windows at the Sears Ltd. store were broken Monday night and several persons were bitten by guard dogs posted to keep vandals away from the establishment.

At one point Monday night, a naked man jumped on top of a car and rode past a wildly appreciative crowd lining the street. Firecrackers were set off. There has been some looting, mainly of appliances.

Mayor Duffy has said the RCMP cannot be called in to break a legal strike unless an emergency, life-and-death situation develops. So far, city and provincial authorities have held back from declaring such a state of affairs.

Jobless lowest in 2½ years

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Canada's jobless rate in June dropped to its lowest level since December, 1976, but New Democratic Party MP Bob Rae warned today the Conservative government should not be "complacent" about the figures.

The government agency said the number of jobless last month registered 798,000, a decrease of 0.2 per cent to 7.5 per cent (seasonally adjusted) and a full percentage point below figures of June, 1978, when the unemployment rate stood at 8.5 per cent.

Despite the fact that the unemployment rate was at its lowest level in 2½ years, Canada still has the worst jobless rate in the industrialized world.

Unemployment in the United States for June was reported at 5.6 per cent, that country's best showing since 1974. Most recent avaiable rates for other major industrial democracies were 4.9 per cent in France, 3.7 per cent in West Germany, 2.1 per cent in Japan and 5.4 per cent in Britain.

In Victoria the actual unemployment rate fell to seven per cent in June from 7.4 in May and 9.2 in April.

There are no seasonally adjusted figures for the Victoria area.

In June, 1978, the rate was 6.4 per cent.

Wally Pickering, manager of the local Canada Employment Centre, said the slightly higher unemployment this June, compared with last year, was due almost entirely to an increase in the number of outsiders applying for work here.

In June, he said, there were 114 people from Ontario, 95 from Alberta and 265 from other parts of British Columbia who registered for work in Victoria.

The surprising figure, he said, was the 114 from Ontario. Normally only a small number from that province seek work in Victoria.

The local economy continues to be strong, although unemployment hits high and low levels in reaction to the changing tourist seasons.

Nationally, the unemployment situation has shown steady improvement since last fall. In September, Statistics Canada reported a seasonally adjusted unem-

B.C. set for Skylab

There is a less than a one per cent chance Skylab will fall on B.C., but if it does the Provincial Emergency Program is ready.

Provincial director Robert Neale said today that B.C., like all provinces has established a liaison with Ottawa, which in turn is in close contact with NORAD and NASA.

Locally both federal and provincial officials are working out of the emergency program headquarters in Esquimalt.

A helicopter will be standing by at the adjacent Esquimalt high school and the minute word is received that any pieces of skylab will hit B.C. the helicopter and a special team will be dispatched to the scene to take whatever action is necessary, Neale said.

Quick action is important because there will be two hours or less notice on where pieces of the disintegrating space vehicle will land on earth. Re-entry is expected some time Wednesday.

The Victoria headquarters is receiving hourly bulletins from Ottawa.

Murder, beach party link?

Two Sooke sisters found stabbed to death southeast of Gold River early Saturday morning may have attended a large beach party near Campbell River earlier in the evening, RCMP said today.

Sgt. Ellis Peleskey said there is some suggestion Christine Beatrice Thomas, 26, and her sister Helena Rose Howard, 16, both of 1939 Powliuk Crescent, stopped to join a large group of youths partying at McIvor Lake, about 16 kilometres west of Campbell River on the Gold River road.

Peleskey said the sisters apparently left Sooke early Friday and were hitchhiking to Gold River to visit their family.

He said officers have managed to track down numerous motorists who gave the pair lifts as far as Campbell River.

But beyond that point investigators have drawn a blank.

Peleskey said officers are now trying to locate youths who were at the party at McIvor Lake to determine if the sisters did attend.

The bodies were found by a couple of Port Alberni fishermen on the Elk River Timber logging road.

Gold River coroner Norman Paulson said today both women appeared to have been stabbed numerous times in the back, chest, neck and face and time of death was established as about midnight.

Paulson said there was hardly any blood at the scene, indicating the two had been killed elsewhere. There was no sign of a struggle. He declined comment on whether officers have found a weapon.

The sisters were fully clothed and there was no evidence of sexual assault.

The two were originally from the Port Alberni area.

The family moved to Victoria in 1967 and to Gold River in 1970.

Mrs. Thomas, who was married in 1974 and was divorced from her husband, Harvey, on June 28, had lived in Sooke only a short time. Helena joined her about a month ago.

Paulson said the family has had more than its share of tragedy in recent years. The sisters' mother died in 1973, one brother was killed in a motor vehicle mishap and another committed suicide. Their father, Ambrose, 72, lives on the Mowachaht Indian reserve southwest of Gold River.

A brush with disaster

Two-year-old Ray J. really put his foot in it this morning.

And it has cost his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Jacquot, 1309 Brillaman, a new vacuum cleaner.

Mrs. Jacquot was doing a little housecleaning and went outside to empty the vacuum cleaner bag.

When she came back, she found Ray J. had somehow managed to jam his foot inside the machine.

He sat there hollering.

Unable to free him, she called the Saanich fire department.

Firemen tried soap and gentle persuasion. Both failed. Ray J.'s cries got louder.

Firemen finally used a hacksaw to open the vacuum casing.

A spokesman said Ray J. wasn't half as relieved as his mother.

Canada oil hike to U.S.?

Times News Services

BOSTON — President Jimmy Carter soon will announce that the United States has completed negotiations with Mexico and Canada for increased shipments of crude oil to ease the fuel shortage, the Boston Globe reported today.

The U.S. president reportedly told some officials attending the domestic summit at Camp David, Md., on Monday that the additional oil from Canada and Mexico would help counter the home heating oil crunch expected this winter.

Details of the negotiations, or how much of an increase in oil the United States would get from the two countries, were not reported.

The Globe said that during the first three months of this year Mexico supplied this country with 451,000 barrels of oil a day and Canada provided 548,000 a day.

The Globe also said Carter is expected to propose an energy mobilization board that could move quickly on new energy projects, a costly federal program for the development of synthetic fuels, and postponement of federal environmental goals that would, for example, allow utilities to burn coal.

Meanwhile, in Washington today Deputy Energy Secretary John O'Leary, the No. 2 man in the beleaguered Department of Energy, has sent a letter of resignation t Carter, effective Sept. 4.

O'Leary told CBS that quitting was his own idea. "I'm just plain dead tired," O'Leary said.

Nitinat sinking

The treacherous Nitinat Gap on the west coast of Vancouver Island claimed at least one more victim on Monday.

A spokesman for the RCMP detachment at Lake Cowichan said boaters reported seeing a 24-foot American power boat sink while crossing the Nitinat Bar about 4 p.m.

A woman's body was found by searchers, the spokesman said.

The search was continuing today. It is not known how many people were aboard the boat when it sank.

Strikes could block forest voting

Some union locals threw a wrench into the forest industry's contract ratification procedure Monday as the province's 41,000 wood and pulp workers began voting on proposed two-year contracts that the industry has called the richest ever.

Eighty members of the Canadian Paperworkers Union Local 402 at the Finlay Forest Industries pulp mill at Mackenzie in north-central B.C. voted 93 per cent in favor of turning their 24-hour study session into an official strike.

A spokesman for the local said the strike could block ratification votes by other forestry unions which now are under way. The union's negotiating committee has recommended the 7,500 members accept the contract pending settlement of local issues.

A spokesman for Finlay Forest Industries said today the strike is being viewed as legal and no company action is planned at this time. He said the pulp mill is completely shut down but so far no picket-line has appeared at the plant.

Twenty-five members of Local 1092 at the B.C. Forest Products mill in Mackenzie are on strike over the same issues bothering the Finlay workers, a portion of the proposed contract dealing with allowances for isolated living conditions.

And 70 workers at Prince George Pulp and Paper and Intercontinental Pulp, both in Prince George, walked off the job to protest what they say is a lack of compensation for shift workers.

Meanwhile, results of the ratification vote by 28,000 coastal region members of the International Woodworkers of America are expected in about two weeks.

Wildcat strikes by woodworkers continued Monday although their union has recommended acceptance of the proposed pact. About 3,000 woodworkers were off the job at MacMillan Bloedel operations in the Port Alberni area.

Talks aimed at reaching a tentative agreement for 8,000 woodworkers in B.C.'s southern interior were expected to wrap up Wednesday.

The forest industry has sent pamphlets describing the contract offer to the 5,500-member Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada whose executive has recommended rejection. Voting results were expected late Thursday.

The companies have offered a wage increase of 90 cents an hour this year and 9.5 per cent next year in an agreement which would include additional pension benefits and credits. The base rate in the forest industry when contracts expired last month was $8.16 an hour.

Quebec closes N-plant

OTTAWA (CP) — Quebec's only nuclear power station has been shut down indefinitely, a spokesman for Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. confirmed Monday.

Gentilly 1, the power station located near Trois-Rivieres halfway between Montreal and Quebec City, will be closed for several more months at least for "tests and technical adjustments," the spokesman said.

Hugh Spence of the Atomic Energy Control Board added: "It is possible that Gentilly 1 will have to be closed permanently." The generating plant — condemned by some scientists as a "lemon" — has functioned for only 10 days since opening in May, 1977.

Last week the control board announced it would extend the plant's operating permit by one month to July 31 and announce at the end of the month whether to grant a permit for another year.

Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. is the owner of the plant, built at a cost of between $100 million and $120 million. But Hydro-Quebec is responsible for the plant's maintenance and the Quebec utility is expected to make repairs before the operating permit is extended, the spokesman for the federal body said.

Neither Atomic Energy of Canada nor Hydro-Quebec would specify what the problems in the plant are.

Spence said Gentilly 1 has been plagued by technical problems from the beginning because of its "hybrid" design. The plant combines two cooling processes, one involving heavy water, the other involving ordinary water. Most Canadian nuclear reactors use only the conventional heavy-water process.

$3.5M Eaton's revamp slated

Eaton's today announced it will spend about $3.5 million over the next three years renovating its Victoria store.

The project, including removal of some stock rooms, will produce an additional 15,000 square feet of retail space.

Eaton's is considered one of two anchors to the downtown commercial core. The other, The Bay, is in the middle of a renovation project costing more than $2 million.

The Eaton's program will turn the Government St. building entirely into a home furnishings store.

The project will free additional space in the store's Douglas Street building for men's and women's clothing.

Some structural work is under way now and the renovation program will start early next year.

Meanwhile, The Bay is half way through its renovation work. The company spent more than $1 million in the basement and main floor over the past year. The basement restaurant was redesigned and new kitchen facilities installed.

The main floor was modernized.

Work will begin on the third and fourth floor this fall and target date for completion is Nov. 30.

Crash kills 18

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — Two packed commuter trains collided head on outside Naples today, killing at least 18 persons and injuring about 60, police said. Some of the injured were reported in serious condition.

Rescue workers used blow torches to cut through tangled wreckage and pull out panicky and screaming survivors.

Sandinistas launch attack on Managua

MANAGUA (UPI) — Intercepted Sandinista guerrilla radio said the rebels have launched a general attack from all sides on Managua, Anastasio Somoza's last bastion defended by 5,000 national guardsmen.

Intercepted rebel radio messages late Monday said the guerrillas had begun an offensive from all directions on the capital. Guerrilla columns from the north, east and south clashed with small guard garrisons Monday, some within striking distance of Managua.

Also today, just outside the rebel-held city of Masaya, the Sandinista guerrilla air force made its first appearance in force in an attackupon a national guard fortress.

Military sources said three bi-motor Air Commanders dropped 15 incendiary bombs on Coyotepe Fort, 25 kilometres southeast of Managua. The bombs did little damage to the fort and the planes flew away unharmed, the sources said.

Guard commanders on internal radio estimated they had 5,000 troops on hand to defend Managua. Informed sources said Somoza's soldiers were down to a three-week supply of .50-caliber machine gun and heavy mortar ammunition.

The sources also noted that most of Somoza's generals had applied for and received U.S. visas for themselves and their families.

Guerrilla radio said rebels had captured one of Somoza's two remaining Sherman tanks and two armored cars in La Paz Centro, 38 kilometres north of the capital.

In a press communique Monday, the Sandinistas accused the United States of plotting to kill Somoza and his son, Anastasio Somoza Portocarrero.

The Sandinistas saidtheir intelligence uncovered the CIA assassination plot, known by the code name of "Green Light King II."

The plan was allegedly suspended, however, because Guatemala, Honduras and El Salvador refused to approve it.

The communique said the three-stage plan called for a group of seven Nicaraguans, including Somoza's half brother, Jose Rodriguez Somoza, to carry out the assassination. It called for the aid of 37 national guardsmen to arrest Somoza, then to execute him and his son.

The Sandinistas also announced the end of final guard resistance in Matagalpa, 127 kilometres north of Managua. A guard garrison of about 100 men battled in Esteli, 150 kilometres north of Managua, despite rebel control of the rest of the city.

Air Canada buys 767s

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada has decided to purchase 12 Boeing 767 aircraft to replace its aging DC-8s on North American routes, the airline's board of directors announced Monday night.

The airline will also take options on 18 more of the craft. The entire order could cost Air Canada upward of $1.4 billion.

It is the largest single commitment in the national airline's $3.5 billion program to rebuild it fleet for the 1980s.

Following a board meeting Monday to make a final decision on the purchase, Air Canada chairman Bryce Mackasey said in a statement that the airline had been looking for "an aircraft which is economical to operate and fuel efficient and had a high degree of passenger appeal.

"Since it was designed specifically for North American routes and condition, the 767 fulfills all of those requirements."

Also under consideration was the European-made Airbus A-310.

Both aircraft are wide-bodied, twin-engine models seating between 200 and 240 passengers. The 767 was considered to be more economical for longer flights, while the Airbus was lighter and more suitable for short routes.

The first 767, to be delivered in October, 1982, will cost $41.8 million, while the 12th will cost $50.9 million, the airline said in its statement. The average price of the ordered aircraft is $46.35 million.

The 767 has 200 seats laid out seven abreast with two isles. Air Canada said it has not yet decided how first-class and economy seating will be alloted.

The design allows for a future stretched version of the plane that would increase cargo and passenger capacity, the airline said.

Headliners at Caesars Palace in Las Vegas have enough trouble with autograph hounds. They don't need their names blared over the hotel's paging system every time they get a phone call. The solution — code names. Alan King, for instance, heads for the telephone whenever "Irwin Kinberg" — his real name — is paged. "Janet Parella" brings Raquel Welch to the line. Ann Margret takes messages for "Denise Brown" and Andy Williams answers to "Glenn Davender." But confusion reigns when "Jilly Rizzo" is paged. If Frank Sinatra is there, he answers. If not, the real Jilly Rizzo picks it up — unless it's taken for him by Elliott Sabo who also uses his own name to answer phones for Fred Silverman and Johnny Carson. It's enough to bewilder the CIA.

Home from China, comedian Bob Hope quipped Monday in Los Angeles that age has its rewards behind the Bamboo Curtain: "If you're older, you get a lot of respect . . . I'm amazed I didn't stay a couple more weeks." And he said the country, where he spent a month touring for his television special, was "a great antidote for swollen heads" — he went virtually unrecognized.

Meanwhile, in Belgrade, Jakov Bakic, a naturalized Canadian, said Monday he is still awaiting a written verdict of acquittal on war crimes charges. The prosecution has two weeks in which to lodge an appeal, after receiving the written, effective verdict which is expected this week. Bakic an Edmonton resident, said he would return to Canada "right away, by god," if no appeal is filed. Bakic, who admitted having "done things" for the Royalist Chetnik movement which fought Josip Tito's partisans during the war, pleaded not guilty to the charges.

The word is out among inmates at the Buncombe County Jail in Ashville, N.C.: Don't mess with the doc — even if he is 78 years old. Dr. John Young, jail doctor for the past 21 years, was on his rounds Monday when he found himself with a knife-sharp spoon in his back and hostage to two escaping inmates. Young wrestled one captor, 40 years his junior, to the floor and disarmed him while the other would-be escapee, a nurse held hostage and deputies looked on in amazement.

A 40-year-old Australian has begun what he describes as "a fantastic challenge," a 208-kilometre non-stop run across the hottest part of the world at the hottest time of the year. Tony Rafferty began Monday what may be the first non-stop attempt to run across Death Valley, although other runners have travelled the steaming desert road from Shoshone to Scotty's Castle with rest stops, said Larry Thomas, of the U.S. Park Service. "It's a fantastic challenge to have a go at a run which is considered by most people in the athletic world as the toughest run on earth," Rafferty said.

And finally, in Niagara Falls, Ont., twice a day, nine firefighters and six nurses gather at Greater Niagara General Hospital to roll over a 747-pound patient on to a tarpaulin for medical treatment. The patient, Billy McGuire, 32, of Hendersonville, N.C., and his brother, Benny, who weighs 727 pounds, are listed as the largest set of twins in the world in the Guinness Book of World Records. The twins are in the city on a promotional tour for Ripley's Believe It or Not museum. Billy was brought to hospital July 1 after he scratched an elbow falling off his motorcycle. He developed a respiratory problem while in hospital and now is in fair condition.

Raped, claim boat refugees

SINGAPORE (UPI) — Vietnamese refugees rescued from the South China Sea by a French mercy ship say Malaysian security forces raped the women and tried to rob them. A Malaysian official today denied the allegations.

The Ille De Lumiere hospital ship brought 837 boat people to Singapore Monday where all of them are expected to catch flights to France for resettlement.

A French embassy spokesman said most will leave Wednesday, but 157 left quietly for Paris at today aboard a Boeing 707 chartered by the French Socialist Party.

Women in one party of 550 refugees who said they had arrived on Malaysia's east coast said soldiers raped and robbed them before pushing them back to sea in seven unsafe boats.

"The police were nice but many soldiers, they were very cruel." said one woman who asked not be identified. "They wanted to find gold...they went to every camp and looted and the women and girls...they raped them."

She said the rapes took place "openly, some on board naval ships and some in private homes" near the Kuantan refugee camp.

She said she knew of at least 16 women, including herself, who had been raped by the Malaysians.

Malaysian Home Affairs Minister Ghazali Shafie said the refugees' statements were "wild" and added, "I am quite certain our soldiers are very disciplined ones".

"Anybody can say such a story because they feel themselves to be let down for being pushed out. They want to hit at Malaysians and the best way to do it is to tell the story of rape," Ghazali said.

Begin in Egypt for Sadat huddle

ALEXANDRIA (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin arrived in Egypt today for a three-day summit with President Anwar Sadat at this Mediterranean coastal resort, but both sides said they expect no major advance toward agreement on Palestinian autonomy.

"I leave with an open heart and will do my utmost to strengthen our friendship so that talks between our countries will be fruitful," Begin said in a pre-departure interview with the Israeli newspaper Maariv.

One Israeli official said the latest summit was primarily a continuation of the dialogue that began in earnest after the two men signed their peace treaty in Washington on March 26. Others said the two leaders would discuss general subjects including the normalization of relations and the planned transfer to Egypt of the oil wells Israel developed in the Sinai.

Gandhi's son held after demo

NEW DELHI (AP) — Sanjay Gandhi, son of former prime minister Indira Gandhi, and 30 supporters were arrested today for violating a ban on street protests in Patna in eastern India, the United News of India reported.

Sanjay, 32, was seized while proceeding to a rally organized by the youth wing of his mother's opposition Congress Party, UNI said.

It was his fifth arrest in the past two months on various charges ranging from failure to appear in a court case to attempted murder, assault and rioting during a New Delhi street march in May.

During the 1975-77 emergency regime, Sanjay wielded enormous power behind the scenes but never held an official position. He is standing trial in at least six criminal cases in different courts in northern India.

Meanwhile, 12 more members of Parliament belonging to Prime Minister Morarji Desai's ruling Janata Party announced they had defected to the opposition, reducing the government majority to four in the lower house.

Maestro Fiedler dies at 84

Times News Sevices

Boston Pops Maestro Arthur Fiedler died today in his home. He was 84.

Fiedler, the white-haired conducter familiar to millions of North Americans, was found sprawled in the bedroom of his home about 7:30 a.m. by his wife.

Cause of death was listed as cardiac arrest.

The popular Fiedler was a serious musician who spiced his classical talent with a dose of showmanship under a layer of unending childlike enthusiasm for his craft.

Death followed the latest in a series of illnesses that began with surgery to relieve pressure on his brain in December, 1978.

Fiedler spent a half-century delighting millions of concertgoers — inside Boston's Symphony Hall, outdoors at the Charles River Esplanade separating urban Boston from academic Cambridge, on tours around the country and on public television — with his innovative blend of the classical and popular music.

With his full face, long, flowing white hair and military moustache, Fiedler was one of Boston's most recognized landmarks.

He found musical virtue in both Beethoven and the Beatles, whose compositions for electric guitars he adapted for the reeds and strings of flutes and violins.

To critics who were aghast at his methods, Fiedler responded, "We can't all live in ivory towers."

Fiedler was born in Boston's Back Bay section on Dec. 17, 1894. His Austrian-born father, Emmanuel Fiedler, was the Boston Symphony Orchestra's first violinist while his mother was a good amateur pianist.

"I was brought up in more or less a European way," Fiedler once said. "As a young boy, I practiced the violin and the piano. I'm afraid I didn't like music much more than any other kid. Practice and lessons were drudgery."

But his parents rewarded his good performances on the violin and piano by taking him to vaudeville shows. There he picked up a regard for popular music and showmanship which marked his handling of the Pops.

After studies at the Royal Academy in Berlin, Fiedler joined the Boston Symphony Orchestra as a violinist in 1915.

In 15 years with the orchestra, he also played viola, piano, celesta organ and percussion instruments. And he grew to love the orchestra's power and majesty and wanted to be a conductor.

In 1930, he took over the Pops from Alfredo Casella. Until then, Casella's concerts, started in 1885, had been labeled "Music Hall Promenade Concerts." They had originated when one symphony conductor wanted to keep his musicians in peak condition over the summer.

But under Fiedler, they became known as "popular concerts," and then the simple "Pops."

The Pops under Fiedler has sold more records than any other symphony orchestra in the country. Fiedler's discovery of an almost forgotten piece by Jacob Gade called Jalousie was recorded by the Pops and sold over a million records.

Fiedler also recorded an album of tunes for people unfamiliar with 18th and 19th century music entitled Classical Music for People who Hate Classical Music.

In 1942 he married Ellen Bottomly, who always referred to her husband as "papa." Not only did Fiedler relinquish his status as one of Boston's most eligible bachelors, his marriage curtailed one of his favorite pastimes.

Up to that time it was not unusual to see a fire engine roaring down a city street — with Fiedler, an amateur firefighter, desperately hanging on to the side.

His love of firetrucks was world-known and he was made honorary chief in more than 200 cities from Boston to Tokyo. He would explain that covering fires was much like conducting an orchestra.

"The excitement is the same," he said. "The quickness. When a fire chief arrives on the scene, he has to make a quick decision. How is the fire going to be handled. I find that very much like conducting an orchestra."

Once, a fire was reported in Boston while he was about to perform at the Esplanade. Undaunted, he sent his wife to check out the fire.

A silver lining?

It is possible some good may yet emerge from the ongoing Royal Jubilee Hospital fiasco.

First, the number of open heart operations the hospital is allowed to perform will likely be increased from six per week to nine. Health Minister Bob McClelland has said he will endorse any recommendation from a doctors' committee to increase the number of operations; and that recommendation will probably come forward soon. The increase would mean a quick reduction in the months-long waiting list for the heart operations many see as life-saving.

Second, the Jubilee Hospital may itself move towards some sort of public accountability that is long overdue. Some board members are now beginning to talk about the need for open board meetings and fuller disclosure of information to the public. They are beginning to recognize that the board itself could benefit from some public exposure.

It is unlikely that the situation at the Jubilee would have deteriorated as far as it has, had the hospital board been forced to demonstrate some public accountability during the past few months and years. Had the hospital's administrative problems been made public, the outcry would probably have led to changes long before a government committee had to intervene with a polite but strong report outlining serious weaknesses.

Had the increasing staff and budget shortages been made public gradually as they occurred, the board would probably have been pressured into doing something about the situation before this month's litany of horror stories developed.

And had the board been explaining regularly to the public the tremendous difficulties it was facing because of health ministry constraints and regulations, it would probably have been able to acquire much public support to have things changed.

A change now in the Jubilee board's closed-door policy wouldn't solve the hospital's immediate problems. It might, however, do a great deal to prevent the same sort of problems developing in the future.

Look out below

The impending demise of Skylab seems to have inspired an inordinate number of pretty awful jokes and a burst of activity among the end-of-the-world-is-near types. It's also generated a lot of unwanted bad press for science and technology in general, and the U.S. space program in particular. There seem to be several reasons.

When the Russian Cosmos satellite zoomed across northern skies dropping radioactive bits over the Northwest Territories, it was somehow not a complete surprise. Aside from hockey players and balalaikas, the Soviet Union has not exactly excelled at producing carefully crafted merchandise for the export market.

The U.S. has built a reputation for technological innovation and the high quality of its manufactured goods despite those who knock the products of Detroit and lament the invention of the plastic coffee cup. The reasons stated for Skylab's impending dive back to earth — a budget cutback forced the builders to skimp and somebody miscalculated the effects of sunspot activity — are profoundly disillusioning.

For those who won't be down in their basements on Wednesday, this is what to watch for coming down, not necessarily in this order of course: there's the orbital workshop (OWS in the abbreviation of the space business), airlock module (AM), multiple docking adapter (MDA), Apollo telescope mount (ATM), and payload shroud (PS). If you find a piece that looks like one of these, don't call us.

Locally, you probably won't see very much. Although NASA is not too precise on when or where Skylab will fall, the space agency definitely rules out anywhere south of 50 degrees south latitude or 50 degrees north. In B.C., if you live north of a line connecting Campbell River, Garibaldi, Kelowna and New Denver, breathe easy.

But for the majority of British Columbians who lives south of the 50th parallel, your government is vigilant. Environment Minister Rafe Mair says he is in touch with Washington and Ottawa around the clock. "I can say we are on 24-hour alert and will be able to respond to any problems that occur."

Mair also gets points for most perceptive insight of the day: "It either falls or it doesn't. I don't want anyone to think we can catch the pieces or stop the damage. It just isn't so."

For lovers of coincidences, the Skylab dive will come just a week before the 10th anniversary of man's first step on the moon. The three astronauts on that historic lunar excursion will gather in Washington on July 20 to mark the occasion, one event to be held on the steps of the Smithsonian Institution's air and space museum.

It would be entirely fitting if Skylab were to crash the party, so to speak, and land on the capital whose pennypinching is half to blame for bringing it down. It would at least spare the freight and other costs of installing the defective spacecraft in the museum.

Inventors in the making?

TOKYO — Computers are dumb. Sure they can calculate in microseconds, have an almost infinite memory, never tire and never make mistakes. Yet they cannot, as can any person in the street, recognize patterns.

To illustrate the dumbness of computers, imagine yourself at the unfamiliar city intersection. Instantly, you would be able to recognize the traffic lights among the myriad of lights. A computer, though, would have to scan every light, match its characteristics against the profile of a traffic light stored in its memory, and only then be able to decide whether it could cross the road.

A team of Japanese scientists and engineers, as part of a Ministry of Internal Trade and Industry (MITI) project, now are trying to develop computers that can recognize patterns. (Also, human speech.) Yoneji Musada, president of the Information Society Institute, calls them "Humanized computers."

The wired city

In itself, the project is fascinating. It is doubly fascinating as an example of an attempt by the Japanese to rise to the level of invention.

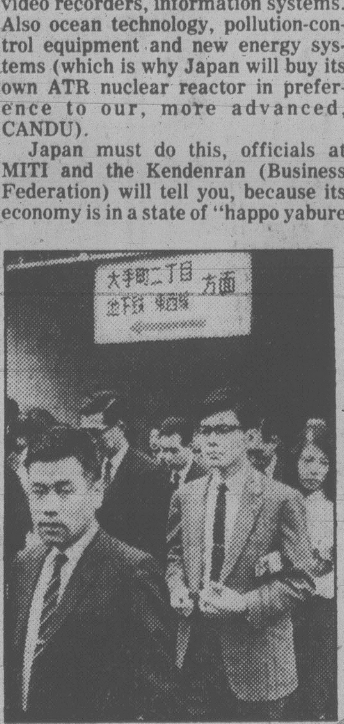
Until now, some pioneering work in fermentation processes and a couple of "wired city" pilot projects are other current exceptions, the Japanese have never tried to advance the state of an art but have simply, and superbly, advanced the industrial arts of others.

After 2,000-years as copiers, the Japanese are trying to become inventors because they have no choice. "Oil shokku", and low-wage competition from the "new Japans" like South Korea and Taiwan, have forced Japan to adopt a Great Leap Forward industrial strategy. It is doing what are only beginning to talk about.

In phase one, Japan will wind down labor-intensive industries like shipbuilding and textiles, as well as energy-intensive ones like petrochemicals and aluminum. These will be, are being, relocated, under Japanese ownership and management, in the "new Japans" and in other developing countries such as, don't blink, Canada.

In phase two, Japan will develop in its own tight little island the new, "knowledge-intensive" industries — computers, telecommunications, video recorders, information systems. Also ocean technology, pollution-control equipment and new energy systems (which is why Japan will buy its own ATR nuclear reactor in preference to our, more advanced, CANDU).

Japan must do this, officials at MITI and the Kendenran (Business Federation) will tell you, because its economy is in a state of "happo yabure no kamae" — defenceless on all eight sides.



JAPANESE
. . . can they originate ideas?

Some of this is special pleading. Japan's economy is the most efficient in the world. In a year or two it will surpass the U.S. in per capita gross national product. It exports only 10 per cent of its output because it has a captive, domestic market of 115 million.

Yet Japan has no oil. And virtually no resources. It has no real friends, only wary trading partners, a circumstance for which the Japanese themselves are to blame because they divide the world into kuni, "our country," and gaikoku, "overseas," a term that makes outsiders as much fellow Asiatics like Vietnames boat people as of friendly, protective, U.S. air force crews.

Japan's only resource is its people — the hardest-working, most productive, most disciplined work force in the world. Also, its bureaucratic business complex, which both keeps the Japanese market safe for Mitsubishi and which, typically, has cut the time-lag between invention and application from, in the U.S., 6.4 years, to, in Japan, 3.6 years. Also, lastly, its unequalled social cohesion.

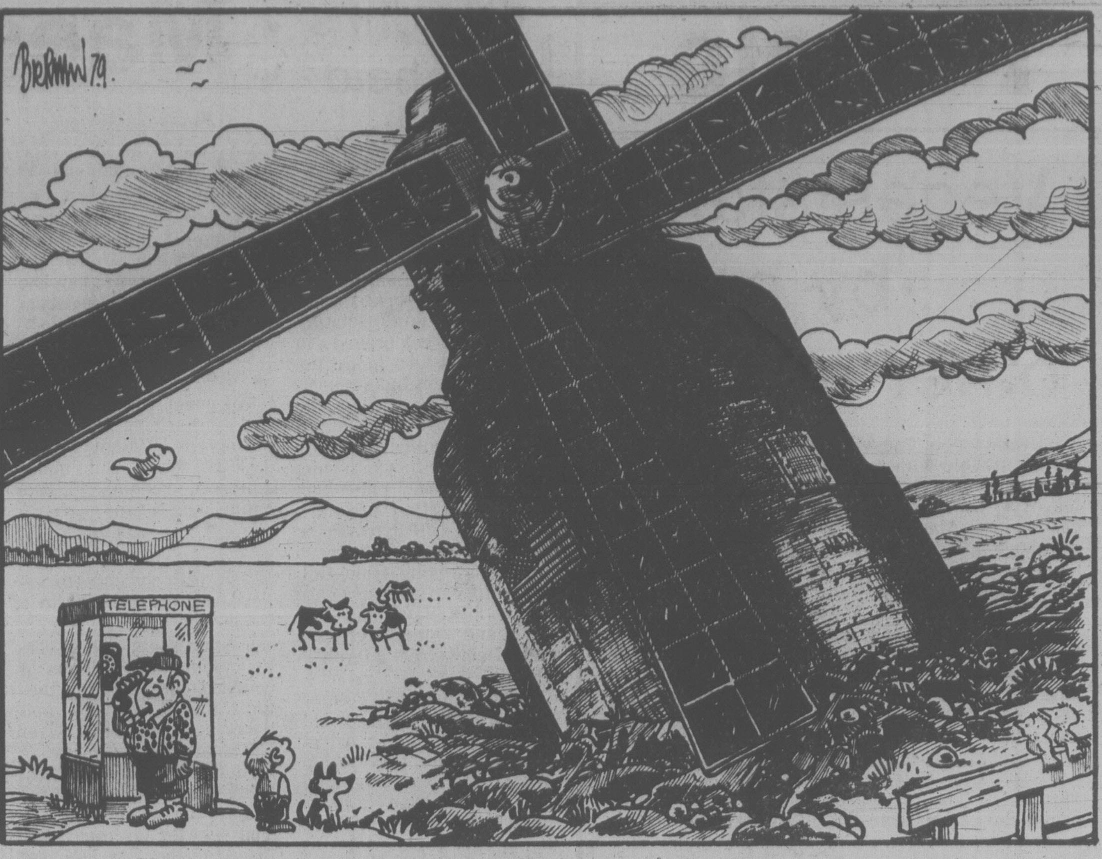
For Japan to be in a state of happo yabure no kamae isn't new. It's novel problem is that it has become, essentially, the world's industrial leader. If you're second, you have no choice but to try harder; if your're first, you have no choice but to blaze a trail, or to fall back.

Can they invent?

Japan never has been first — in anything. It's culture comes from China. It's technological ideas, as opposed to actual industrial products, come from the west. At the concrete and the practical, the Japanese are superb. At the abstract and the speculative, they are the least accomplished of any nation. Those who cannot speculate about the abstract, cannot invent.

Many — the Japanese themselves most of all — doubt whether they can be inventors. Yet they have conquered every other challenge — defeat and occupation, absence of resources, "oil shukku," trade wars, and, perhaps most impressive of all, the transition of an agricultural society to an urban, industrial one without any disruption of social harmony. And, rather than mere copiers, they have been adapters, refiners, and improvers.

Invention is the last of the two great challenges facing Japan. The other is to become internationalists, that is to recognize that there is more to the world than "the country" and "overseas." Probably you'll see a computerized robot with the trademark Fujitsu scampering across street corners long before you'll see Vietnamese boat people in downtown Tokyo.



" . . . hello, NASA? . . . "

Can't blame him

In an editorial on June 29 (Can You Blame Them?) you mention the low opinion the public has of politicians and you use as an example Premier Bennett's broken promise of some years ago to provide $2¼ million to help Vietnamese children. It is a pity that you use the "power of the press" that you hold to simply make a statement rather than lash out at the inadequacies of our politicians. By simply condoning their ignorance or double-talk you are promoting their laziness to learn the facts, and the ease of making promises they know no one will nail them to.

I would not fault Premier Bennett for frankly calling off his aid promise of some years back because circumstances have changed and international aid is a terrible hoax anyway (and I know something about it). But it is the lack of frankness and the bantering remarks he and other politicians make regarding issues of all kinds and often vitally important, that discredit the political process.

Over the past year, in my efforts to impart some of my forestry experience and technology to the public and MLAs, I have met with some success in creating a better understanding of the problems of forest management. But, from the admission of the MLAs themselves who have contacted me, their understanding of forestry has been limited to the logging process, if that. Yet, the primary lifeline of this province depends on that renewable resource and the protection it provides to the salmon spawning grounds of our second most important renewable resource.

Is there not something very wrong in our political process and our meekness to accept the mental laziness and lack of frankness of our politicians, and can we really not do anything about it? I think we can. And furthermore I feel that many politicians would welcome a closer relationship with well-informed public groups which can help them rather than just expect them to solve issues of which they seldom have full knowledge. Your editorial on the Vietnamese fund promise was completely amorphous on that score. You have the power to do better. Besides improving the editorial standards may I suggest that a television and press program somewhat like the McNeil-Lehrer Report with Peter Pollen as interviewer would do wonders to open minds to island and provincial facts and reduce public-MLA confrontation through ignorance. Think about it for the next two months. — D.M. Trew, 37-1240 Newport Avenue.

Cult of planners

Over the last few years a new cult has been establishing itself in secure positions all over the country. The adherents to this cult are for the most part quite sincere in their beliefs, and also as in any other religion, quite sure that their dogma is 100 per cent right and everyone else is on the wrong track. They are of course, the planners who are well entrenched in almost every city and town and since the advent of regional districts even in uninhabited areas of the province.

Who are these people who preach that their way is the only way? For the most part they are ordinary human beings with the same strengths and weaknesses as ordinary citizens and who for one reason or another have joined the faith. Probably one will find in their ranks the same proportion of alcoholics, broken homes and mental illness as the general population. What gives them the authority to show lay people the absolute answers for all problems?

Usually nothing, except for the undying faith of their disciples who are to be found in great numbers in municipalities and especially in regional districts. Faith is a wonderful thing because with it one can surmount all obstacles including common sense and reason.

The politicians and their supporting bureaucrats, or should it be the bureaucrats and their supporting politicians, (since elected officials come and go but the bureaucrats rule forever), are mostly to blame for this runaway planning nightmare by creating legislation such as the Municipal Act. This particular act gives heavy emphasis on planning and especially for regional districts, most of whom have rushed right in to plan and zone almost every square inch (2.54 cm²) of the province in order to plan the lives of all the inhabitants.

That they are not winning over many converts is evidenced by increasing hostility, such as court cases from ordinary citizens who are tired of being pushed around by the planners. If planning departments and their supporting bureaucrats, especially in regional districts, continue to carry on with their autocratic methods as they have done over the last few years, they will indeed be in for a rough time. People will only be intimidated for a while. Eventually they will fight back when they realize their rights are being eroded by an elitist cult of planners and bureaucrats.

The religion of planning will not attract many converts as long as the planners try to force planning down our throats, and in some cases use the plan to delay actually doing something until a problem goes away. What we need is less planning and more freedom to look after our own affairs.

It seems that the vast amounts of money spent on education and training all of us in our schools and universities so that we can think for ourselves and cope with what we call civilization, will be largely wasted if the big brother planners continue to interfere and rule every facet of our lives. — Joe Pullen, Errington.

The last word

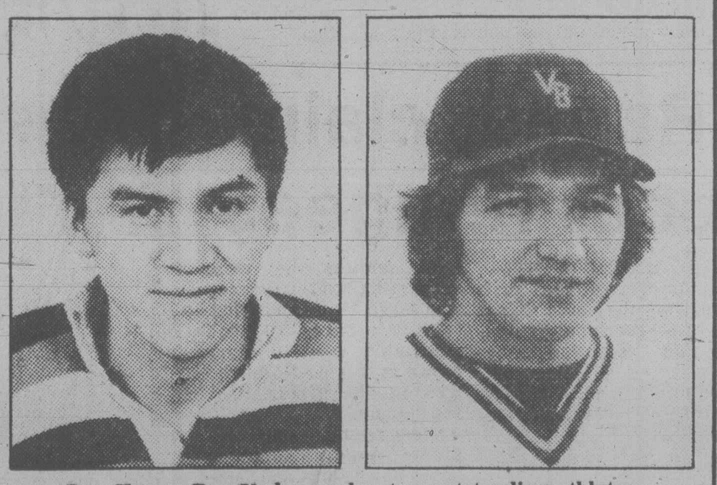
You may live to regret the last sentence of your editorial (July 3) entitled Church and State.

Writing of the local churches' arguments against having their buildings designated "heritage" you said: "They would have been better received if they had tempered their extreme posiion, and if their policy of complete and utter separation of church and state wasn't so obviously untenable."

You say this when it is convenient to your own position. It will be nice to throw the comment back at you when it becomes convenient to us. — Hilary Butler, Editor, Anglican Diocesan Post.

Grain elevators

I am interested in obtaining information concerning the history, design and construction of country grain elevators on the prairies. In particular I would like to contact any retired elevator operators who have some knowledge of this subject. I can be contacted at the following telephone number, weekdays — 477-6911, local 6169. — Martin Segger, Director/Curator Maltwood Art Museum and Gallery.



Dan Henry, Reg Underwood — two outstanding athletes.

Where's he been?

I cannot let E. J. Lattes' letter Sports for Natives (July 3) go unanswered. Mr. Lattes obviously has just arrived in Canada after spending a lifetime watching B movies.

He blithely states that the Indians have had no leadership such as Martin Luther King. Has any group in Canada had a leader such as Mr. King?

But leadership — has he never heard of those outstanding B.C. Indians such as George Clutesi, Jimmy Sewid, Frank Calder, Philip Paul, George Manuel, Bill Wilson and so many more?

Are these men to be ignored and discounted because E. J. Lattes has never heard of them? On the distaff side he should enquire after the health of Millie Godfriedson, Rose Charlie, Gloria Webster and Judge Marge Cantron — where have you been Mr. Lattes?

No great sportsmen? Does the name Stan Jonathan ring a bell? George Armstrong? Joe Jacobs? Or maybe Chief Thunderbird from Saanich who won world acclaim as a professional wrestler.

In soccer the Henry family is one of Victoria's best known. Who (except Mr. Lattes) can forget Herman Henry in his heyday?

Son Danny played against Bristol City just a few weeks ago. Dan Henry was a member of the provincial championship team and will be in the dominion final.

The Thunderbirds, an all Indian team toured Britain in 1974 and Hawaii in 1979 managed by Skip Dick.

Larry Louis had try-outs for the Whitecaps: Daryll Ferguson is a member of that team. Roger Adolph won a Golden Gloves competition. Reg Underwood is currently in Puerto Rico with the softball Budgets — another member of an illustrious Saanich family.

Has Mr. Lattes ever met Ernie Campbell? Joe Big Canoe? Alex Nelson? And that great scrum half Richard Shaughnessy. I didn't even mention the lacrosse players.

Mr. Lattes equates sports with physical and mental health. Where has he been all his life? I thought the healthy body — healthy mind myth died years ago. Does Mr. Lattes think that one Indian on a stand at a track meet will improve the lot of the Indian in Good Hope Lake? Nothing could be further from the truth. He must be from the old school as espoused by the well known football coach addressing his players: "Football builds character, inspires leadership, gives a sense of fulfillment and individuality. Now get out there and do as I told you."

No, Mr. Lattes, leave the Indian sport alone. The Indians will find a way to have their "pullums" and their lahal. To succeed in sports, Indians must be twice as good as their white counterpart. Fortunately this is no problem. — Jack R. Kelly, 1832 Carnarvon Street.

Roaring inflation scorches South America's poor

By BLAIK KIRBY
The Globe and Mail

BUENOS AIRES — In a railway town in Northern Argentina, a mother sat weakly in the marketplace, selling something: her son. Her meagre income was no longer enough for food. If she were to starve, she wanted him to live. So . . .

Of course, that story is third- or fourth-hand. The sobering thing is that, in a South America that has been racked by inflation for 30 years or more, no one doubts it.

In Argentina, 48 per cent of children drop out before completing primary school, because they must work to help the family fight inflation. In 15 years, the illiteracy rate has gone from 1 per cent to 5 per cent of the population, even though anyone with even one one year of school is counted as literate.

Santa is a young Indian in Buenos Aires. She works as maid for a European family, for room and board and a wage of 1,200 pesos a month — a mere $12. Her family survives, she says, only because every member works, including the very young, and because the family has a small plot where it raises vegetables and chickens.

The poor are pushed to the very edge of desperation not just by constant poverty but by daily increasing poverty. In Brazil, dried codfish — once a staple of the poor man's diet — now costs more than 100 cruzieros (about $4.50) a kilo. In Argentina, a litre of milk (less than a quart) costs only 39 cents, but 200 grams of butter (less than half a pound) is $1.30 — and many laborers work for only $100 to $150 a month.

I saw an ordinary-looking shirt in a shop window in a lower-middle-class district of Buenos Aires, selling for $36.50, and a tie for $21. In Brazil, prices are noticeably lower; the shirt would have sold for about $25, still a lot by North American standards. Argentina has double-digit inflation: double digit per month.

Chile's inflation was, a few years ago, between 300 and 400 per cent a year, though it has now deceased. Argentina's was 169 per cent last year and 159 per cent the year before. Brazil's was 42 per cent last year. Not long ago it ranged as high as 90 per cent. In Argentina and Brazil no one believes the current figures are anything more than an official mask to conceal a real inflation that's much worse.

Governments make nominal statements of their intention to fight inflation. "Argentina has had a pact with inflation for 30 years," says James Neilsen, a respected economics columnist for the Buenos Aires Herald. "Now the government is trying to undo that past, slowly and carefully." The effect, however, has been negligible. Even a military dictatorship does not want to irritate so many people at once.

In Brazil, the country's new president (another general takes his turn at the helm) came to office saying he intended to reduce the price of food for the people. The day after he was installed, the price of milk went up 34 per cent.

Those hardest hit are on fixed incomes, such as shop clerks and civil servants. It is now common to hold a second job. Among Brazilian university professors, I'm told, it's almost taken for granted. School teachers are so badly paid one man called them "martyrs." More than one person told me the middle class in Argentina, the most European and bourgeois of South American nations, no longer existed: "Everyone feels poor." But, just as in Canada, there are those who know how to use inflation to get rich.

Chief among them, at least in the opinions of many, are shopkeepers who mark up their merchandise far more than actual inflation. Constant inflation is a wonderful tool for those who are selling because it destabilizes prices — you no longer know the proper price for anything—and because it spurs a desperation to buy. That's awfully good for business. In Argentina, it is almost universal to spend money as quickly as you get it: Tomorrow it will buy less.

Frantic spending also extends to horse races, casinos (the biggest in the world, with 130 tables, is at Mar del Plata, an Argentina resort) and lotteries. Even expensive entertainments sell out quickly in a desperate hunt for distraction and delight while you can afford it. Buenos Aires theatre lineups were so long they sold out. Restaurants are thronged, even though prices would make a Torontonian turn back.

"Butchers, grocers and restaurants are very happy with inflation," a retired teacher told me with some bitterness. She sees shopkeepers getting richer, and prices escalating, every week. Her husband is retired too. They cannot live on their pensions, even though they are indexed every three months, as are many wages.

Luckily he has a rental income in a stable foreign currency. This has helped him realize that living costs have risen even faster than the peso deflates. Three years ago, it cost $500 a month, U.S., for one elderly couple. Now it costs $1,500. The cost in pesos has not just tripled but multiplied about 10 times.

The retired husband realizes he cannot just let his assets stand as savings. "To save is to lose." I was told over and over. Interest rates in Argentina are about 110 per cent a year. When inflation is 160 per cent, mere bank interest is a losing proposition. You must make your money work harder than that. So the husband goes to the stock market every day. That's better than investing in dollars, which appreciate only half as fast as inflation.

There are also those who profit from inflation by pure luck. Claudia Olivieri is a pretty 22-year-old who works in the Buenos Aires tourist office. Fifteen years ago, she recalls, her family could not afford to buy a house. But in those days apartments could be bought with fixed-instalment payments. Within six months, the amount her father was paying was "a joke." Today, instalment payments are indexed like everything else.

Computers

Tonio Rosenblun used to work with computers. He liked the job, but as an employee his salary was worth less each month. Inflation forced him to convert himself to something he likes much less. Now he owns a 24-hour auto body repair shop, where he can charge what the traffic will bear. Even that is not enough to counter inflation.

"Even with a shop," he says, "it is difficult to grow. You have to save 10 per cent a month, as a minimum, to put into the shop, and something more to make the business grow, say another 10 per cent. You have to make more money every day, because you need more. And you take the least you can for living. If you had any left over, it would inflate."

Nowadays, Tonio and Beatriz buy no clothes, take few holidays (weekend jaunts twice a year instead of once a month) and, they say, "we must choose between books and food, between shoes and a sweater."

Even with the pressures of inflation, however, of being forced to change and adapt and do without, Beatriz and Tonio still prefer the Argentina of today to that of Peron's times. The reason is simple: They are physically safer. Peron's police, some of them recruited from jails, used to shoot up the town just for the fun of it. "Peron had a mafia," Tonio says. "It was the Wild West, and nobody cared."

Tonio and Beatriz are attractive young people. Both are well educated, cultured and triligual, in French, English and Spanish. They are obvious assets to Argentina — but in these inflation condition, they are thinking of emigrating to Canada. Ten per cent inflation there? They laugh.

Frustration fuelling 'South-South' talks

By GEOFFREY LEAN

Poor countries, frustrated by lack of progress in their attempts to get a better deal from the rich, are to try to increase economic ties between themselves.

Three preliminary meetings in what is now being dubbed "the South-South dialogue" are to take place before the end of the year, and an increasing number of countries is urging the Third World to abandon the "North-South dialogue" with the rich altogether.

This follows the failure of the fifth United Nations Conference on Aid and Development (UNCTAD V) in Manila last month. The conference was the climax of a long series of disappointing negotiations between rich and poor nations, and ended in a kind of triumph for the stonewalling tactics the rich have employed ever since the poor began demanding a "new international economic order" five years ago.

This year's meetings are to discuss three possible ways in which the Third World could strengthen economic co-operation among themselves; cutting tariff barriers against each other, setting up multinational marketing enterprises and co-operation between state trading organizations.

In the past, poor countries have proposed setting up co-operatives to buy goods in bulk from rich countries. This could provide them with a powerful weapon, not only in getting better bargains, but in applying political pressure.

For the time being, however, this ambitious ideal, like a plan to set up a Third World Bank to reduce dependence on rich world currencies, is not on the agenda.

Most Third World countries now feel trade among themselves is more desirable than trade with the rich. They believe, with some justification, that when they deal with industrialized countries they are exploited.

The majority believes that the "South-South dialogue" and the "North-South dialogue" should be pursued at the same time. But an increasing number of militants is urging the poor to turn their backs on the rich altogether and only return to the bargaining table once they have built up their own strength. The militants are expected to push their case particularly stongly at the non-aligned summit in Havana in September.

Whichever view prevails, the poor countries urgently need to become more united and gain more bargaining power.

At the beginning of the negotiations for a new international economic order they were reasonably strong, since the Third World as a whole, including the OPEC countries, formed a common front.

But OPEC's interests, at first coinciding with those of the Third World as a whole, have now diverged; and with poor countries suffering worst from oil price rises, it seems the divisions between the oil exporters and the poor cannot be papered over much longer.

Meanwhile, the worldwide recession has enabled rich countries to argue that they can do nothing for the poor until their economies improve, and that all countries are now in the same boat — an argument that would deprive the poor of some of the moral impetus of their case.

The negotiations urgently need a new start. Almost all the original demands on the agenda for the "new international economic order" (like the stabilizing and increasing of earnings from raw materials exported by the poor, the bringing down of tariff barriers against their goods, debt relief and doubling aid to the level set up as a target in 1970) have either been talked into the ground or ended in compromises that fall well short of what the poor wanted.

The best chance for a new impetus lies with a special session of the UN General Assembly on development next year, and with the Brandt Commission, a group of leading world figures who are attempting to work out a new strategy for what is becoming increasingly seen as the most important issue for the world's economic and political stability in the next quarter of a century.

Statistics clear smoke

By VICTOR COHN
The Washington Post

It is time to demolish two commonly held myths about cigarette smoking.

Both have clouded this issue vital to health for too many years. And both continue to pollute the debate set off by publication of the United States' surgeon-general's latest devastating anti-smoking report.

One myth is that crusades of mere words — like U.S. Health, Welfare and Education Secretary Joseph Califano's, to take the current example — can't change smoking habits.

The other is that ending federal tobacco-growing supports, the bete noire of the anti-smokers, would help halt smoking.

In fact, words have had a mighty effect over the last 25 years. And ending aid to tobacco growers would probably increase, not decrease smoking.

First, the matter of words or, if you will, anti-smoking propaganda.

After the recent anti-smoking report was issued, a Chicago Tribune Washington correspondent wrote, "Most political observers believe that as long as the tobacco industry has friends in Congress and the White House, Califano's war will be as potent as a candy cane."

In the same vein, Dr. Sidney Wolfe, Ralph Nader's health man, said, "The war against smoking is a sham."

Wolfe's main point, well taken as far as it goes, was that the war on smoking gets but a fraction of the money spent on wars on less harmful drugs.

But if there ever has been a success for a sparely funded public policy — a policy of mere words — the anti-smoking campaign is it.

There are more smokers aged 17 and over today (54.1 million) than there were in 1965 (53.3 million). But there has been a truly profound change in American cigarette habits.

In 1955, 37 per cent of all adults smoked. By 1965, the figure had become 42 per cent, but the increase now was entirely among women. Some men had started to quit, and by 1978 the figure for all adults was only 33 per cent, down more than a quarter from the 1965 high.

Among men, cigarette use peaked at 51 per cent in 1955-57. In 1978, the figure was 37.5 per cent.

In 1955, only one woman in four smoked. But smoking among adult females, up steadily since the 1930s, has peaked and now is down to 29.6 per cent by a federal survey (and 34 per cent by Gallup's count).

At the same time, however, smoking among the young, and particularly among girls, has increased. Indeed, smoking among older boys may have begun levelling off.

A survey of adolescents who smoke at least weekly found 2.9 per cent of boys 12 to 14 in this class in 1968, 5.7 per cent in 1970 but 4.2 per cent in 1974. Among girls 12 to 14, 0.6 per cent smoked in 1968 but 4.9 per cent by 1974; at 15 to 16, the percentage doubled, from 9.6 in 1968 to 20.2 in 1974; at 17 to 18, it rose from 18.6 in 1968 to 26 in 1974.

"Well," say some of the critics, "if anti-smoking propaganda has been so successful among men why has it had less effect among women and none among teenage girls?"

The experts cannot reply with any scientific sureness. But it is obvious that the past few decades have seen two social movements that have dwarfed the modest anti-smoking effort: the rise of the youth culture and the emergence of male-like female behavior.

We still see emergent, often rebellious teenagers searching for rites of passage and defiance. And we see emergent, yet often highly insecure women. Both groups have reached for the cigarette as a sign of independence .

Even among these groups, however, there has been one important change for the better. This is the change in the cigarette itself, a change again triggered by "mere" words, very much including the federal publication of tar and nicotine figures.

In 1954, less than 1 per cent of all cigarettes were filter types; by 1964, filters had 64 per cent of the market. In 1954, the average cigarette delivered 36 milligrams of tar and over 2 of nicotine. By 1977, the average tar per cigarette sold had dropped to around 17 milligrams and nicotine to 1.1.

Some of the flavor-adding ingredients of the "new" milder cigarette may be carcinogens that as yet remain unidentified. Yet the lung tissues of current smokers look strikingly cleaner to pathologist than smokers' lungs of the 1950s.

Finally, Americans' cigarette consumption last year dropped to 3,965 cigarettes per person 18 and older, compared with 4,336 cigarettes — nearly 10 per cent more — in 1963. And the greatest declines have taken place during the periods of most intense anti-smoking publicity.

What of the alleged role of federal price supports in spurring cigarette use? The facts argue otherwise.

The federal program, first of all, is actually not a "subsidy" but a loan program. Tobacco farmers, mainly small operators doing much hand labor, are given either acreage or poundage allotments — in fact, limitations.

Wolfe believes price supports should be ended and "farmers aided to get into other lines of work."

Politically, the chance of that happening is zero today, and it probably should be zero in a free society .

Department store space limits set

Department store space in the proposed Tillicum shopping complex will be limited to 240,000 square feet, Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier said Monday after a special council meeting.

He said the concession is an important one because the developers don't legally have to restrict department store space.

Council has received the "reluctant approval" of West Vancouver developers Cal Investments Ltd., he said.

Saanich is offering to help the Capital Region Board amend the regional plan to see that this type of problem doesn't happen again, Couvelier said.

The board doesn't have the power to limit the size of the shopping centre, but the wording of the plan can be altered to justify the board's involvement, he said.

The board opposes the Tillicum complex on the grounds it endangers plans for a major department store development in Langford to serve the western communities.

Saanich has given final approval to a 295,000 square-foot, two-storey shopping centre on the site of the Tillicum Outdoor Theatre.

The complex was to include a major department store (Zeller's), a smaller department store, small shops and a supermarket.

Since no restriction had been placed on the size of the department stores, the entire 295,000 square feet could have been used for that purpose, Couvelier explained.

He said regional board directors are involved in unhealthy competition for tax-profitable developments because the regional plan doesn't contain a revenue-sharing plan formula.

Couvelier said last week he will ask the board to come up with a revenue-sharing plan to distribute the wealth between the have and have-not electoral areas.

"Without revenue-sharing the regional concept won't be as good as it should be," he said.

Meanwhile, a special meeting to discuss the proposed Broadmead shopping centre has been delayed until September.

Couvelier said council decided to postpone the meeting, set for Wednesday, until it has time to study a staff report on the proposed development.

The report isn't ready because developer Broadmead Farms Ltd. was slow in supplying the necessary information, Couvelier said.

The meeting will be delayed until all aldermen have returned from summer holidays.

Sewage dump idea opposed

Esquimalt council Monday night opposed a Capital Region District proposal to build a sewage dumping station on Devonshire Road to be used by septic tank disposal trucks.

Ald. Larry Mann told council the pumping station would increase truck traffic through residential areas of Esquimalt, and pointed out they would be dumping sewage originating outside the municipality.

Ald. Ken Hill said Esquimalt is facing the problem because View Royal ratepayers had opposed an initial attempt by the region to put the station in that area to take advantage of main roads and proximity of the trunk sewer serving the new hospital.

While Mayor Art Young opposed the Devonshire Road site, he said the region must find an alternative to the near-capacity Millstream Road site.

In other business, council set minimum prices of $28,500 and $30,000 on municipally-owned lots on Rockcrest and Highrock to be offered for sale.

Council also agreed to call tenders for construction of concession and exercise buildings under the Bullen Park Neighborhood Improvement Program. About $60,000 has been allocated for the buildings.

Red tape killing big development?

The pioneering spirit in B.C. isn't dead, it's just being smothered by government bureaucracy and ministerial indecision, say officials of a fledgling company with grand plans for northern Vancouver Island.

But the government says the partners in North Island Projects Ltd. don't seem to know what kind of enterprise they want to get into, and whatever it is, they want something for nothing.

The story involves the dream of three immigrants from Communist countries who envision a giant plastics factory on Crown land in the Port McNeill area.

Workers at the plant would be fed from a 160-acre farm, also to be on Crown land in the area.

Partner and company vice-president Dave Sandhaus said he is growing fed up with the four-year battle he has had with government trying to get land for the farm and factory, and salvage rights to the logged areas surrounding Port McNeill.

It is the debris from logging operations that is now burned as slash that would form the basis for the plastics factory.

The three partners say a European method that has not been tried in Canada can extract ethylene from wood waste for making plastic.

But the forest giants don't want them taking anything, even the slash that is cleaned up through burning, from their tree farm licences, said Sandhaus, in Victoria this week for another appeal to Forest Minister Tom Waterland.

He said the forest companies say that if they give away the slash, it will be deducted from their harvest quotas.

So it is burned off instead of being turned into a useful product that could employ hundreds of people in a thriving north plastics Island industry, he said.

The government won't even give them 160 acres for a farm, he added. All the company is asking is an opportunity to prove itself. Using farm techniques that one of the partners, Walter Zajancauskas, brought with him from Lithuania, they say they can operate a highly successful vegetable and dairy farm in the area.

"Our ability will speak for itself," Sandhaus said.

Waterland said if the agriculture minister finds the land in question is good for agriculture, then it could recommend to the lands ministry that the forest ministry remove it from the forest reserve.

But it would be sold at market value, not given away, Waterland said.

"But we have to be careful about taking land out of the forest reserve," he said. "We have to treat the extraction of forest land from the forest reserve as we do agriculture land from the agriculture reserve."

Waterland said Ukrainian-born Sandhaus is well-known to him.

He said the company has proposed several different schemes over the years and can't seem to make up its mind what it wants to do.

At one time they were given a salvage permit, but as soon as they got on to the tree farm licence land, they began harvesting prime timber, so were quickly booted off.

But North Island Projects pushes on. They have a proven record, they say. All they need is a decision from government and they will open up the north island like pioneers of the past.

Mine digs in on discipline

FRASER LAKE (CP) — Placer Development Ltd. turned down a union suggestion Monday that the company waive disciplinary action against some of its employees in exchange for a contract settlement at the strike-bound Endako mine.

The Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers proposed an agreement providing for a 15-per-cent pay raise and a guarantee that no workers will be disciplined for actions during the bitter five-month walkout.

During the strike, which began Feb. 14, the company has continued to ship mineral concentrates from the mine, which is the largest molybdenum operation in Canada.

Union pickets and supporters surrounded the trucks carrying the ore out and in at least one instance a shot was fired at a truck. Company-hired vehicles have been stoned and a bridge leading to the mine about 150 kilometres west of Prince George was destroyed.

Placer Development spokesman Mel Thompson says while the company is prepared to go along with the wage increase, pending resolution of other monetary issues, it does not want to completely rule out disciplinary action.

The company would not fire employees for their actions but will not waive suspensions, he added.

Bob Greene, union spokesman, said he is disappointed in the company's stance and says the union will step up secondary picket action and ask other unions not to handle Placer products.

An industrial inquiry commission report prepared last month would have left 11 of the 500 striking employees at the mine open for disciplinary action. The union said that the report was unacceptable on that account and because it did not propose a large enough pay raise.

Base rate at the mine is now $6.43 an hour.

B.C. Briefs

Ministry may appeal firing

Labor Minister Allan Williams said his ministry is seeking legal advice on whether to appeal an inquiry board decision which clears a Catholic school of discrimination in the firing of a teacher who married a divorced Protestant.

The NDP, expressing indignation at what it said is religious discrimination, has been calling on the government to withdraw funding from St. Thomas Aquinas School in North Vancouver and appeal the board ruling.

In reply to a question from Karen Sanford (NDP — Comox), the party's education critic, Williams said any appeal would be based on legal advice. Lawyers were now examining the board's decision.

Health hotline expanded in fall

The health ministry will expand its toll-free telephone service in the fall for doctors who need to verify if their patients are eligible for medical care benefits.

D.H. Weir, chairman of the B.C. Medical Services Commission, said Monday the expanded program will link doctors in remote areas to operators at computer terminals in Victoria.

Doctors in the Vancouver area have had toll-free access to the computer for several years, he said.

Arson suspected in nightclub fire

TRAIL (CP) — Police suspect gasoline was used to start at early-morning fire at a city nightclub which seriously burned club manager Marvin Bell of Trail.

Bell has been flown to the burn unit at the Vancouver General Hospital suffering from first- and second-degree burns.

He was alone in the club when there was an explosion about 3 a.m. Saturday, followed by the fire. Damage is estimated at $200,000.

Tentative supermarket accord

Three unions representing 9,300 workers in B.C.'s supermarket industry have reached a tentative settlement with employers.

Rudy Krickan of the Retail Clerks Union said details of the weekend settlement will not be released until the membership is notified of the terms.

The two other unions are the Canadian Food and Allied Workers Union and the Bakery, Confectionary and Tobacco Workers International Union.

The proposed agreement would cover workers at Canada Safeway Ltd., Super-Valu Stores Ltd., Stong's Markets, Mark It, Lodom, Hi-Lo and Shop Easy Stores.

UBC workers accept contract

VANCOUVER (CP) — The 1,600 University of British Columbia non-teaching employees have voted 82 per cent in favor of a new one-year contract, retroactive to April 1.

Ken Andrews, president of Local 116 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said the agreement provides a wage and benefits increase of 7.9 per cent, bringing the hourly base rate to $7.40.

No harm from chemical spill

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A toxic chemical spill of 1½ million gallons into the Thompson River last month did not cause environmental harm, a spokesman for the provincial pollution control branch said Monday.

A black liquor from one of the Weyerhaeuser pulp mill evaporators accidently escaped into the seven-day waste treatment system and then into the river. The black liquor normally is recycled through the plant.

Regional biologist Don Holmes said the spill was relatively safe because the high water level significantly diluated the chemical.

$500,000 ski condo blaze

KELOWNA (CP) — Fire caused $500,000 damage Monday morning to two condominiums at Big White ski village, 64 kilometres east of here. They were owned by three Kelowna residents. There were no injuries.

Boy Scouts trudge to jamboree

DOUGLAS LAKE (CP) — Seven members of the First Port Coquitlam Scout Troop battled heat and blisters as they trudged to the third British Columbia-Yukon Scout Jamboree.

They left Vancouver June 28, treking about 30 kilometres each day on their way to the jamboree 80 kilometres south of Kamloops.

They hope the journey will win them the Provincial Boy Scout Commissioner's Award.

Publisher hides after 'kidnap'

LANGLEY (UPC) — Newspaper publisher Peter Lasch has gone into hiding after he was reportedly kidnapped, beaten and told to drop a series of articles describing alleged corruption in the Saudi Arabian government.

The publisher says he was kidnapped last Thursday about 4 a.m. on his way home from work. Police said Monday they are still checking the story.

Lasch has not been available for comment since the incident. Reporters at Lasch's Daily News, which is competing in Vancouver's newspaper market, said he fears reprisals from his abductors and has "gone underground."

Lasch claimed he was beaten several times with a blackjack and told to drop the paper's series of articles on Saudi Arabia.

Lasch was found later in Mission, about 15 kilometres east of Langley, "in a distraught condition" after he called his wife from a phone booth. Police took Lasch to hospital, where he was examined by a doctor and released.

"I'm still not 100 per cent satisfied that this incident happened," said the police spokesman. "The doctor that checked him out said he was hyperventilated, or exhausted, and apparently there was a bruise somewhere on his body."

WEST VANCOUVER (CP) — A Nanaimo baseball team struck out of a ferry sailing Sunday and four of its members were sent to the RCMP showers.

A West Vancouver police spokesman said the unidentified team of 22- to 25-year-olds arrived on a chartered bus for the 4:30 p.m. ferry from Horseshoe Bay to Departure Bay.

The spokesman said that after they boarded, the ferry's first officer refused to transport the team because liquor was flowing "and he anticipated problems on the crossing."

Because buses board first, the ferry left the dock, turned around and redocked so the bus and team could be taken off.

Police were called to assist a roundup of some of the more boisterous players.

The spokesman said that four of the stragglers were taken into custody because they were drunk in a public place and were held in jail until they sobered up.

He said he did not know when the team returned home.

Box score on the episode: a 30-minute delay in the rest of the day's sailings.

Dolly just a country girl at heart

Scott's World

Dolly Parton is taking her platinum hair, enormous bosom and exciting music to Japan and other stops in Asia for the first time, where, she says, the natives dig American country music.

She expects to repeat the triumph of her European tour last fall.

Fame, wealth and plaudits have left 33-year-old Dolly as unspoiled as the day she arrived in Knoxville, Tenn., as a 10-year-old, cardboard suitcase in hand, to make her professional TV debut.

Her back-country accent is as heavily flavored with the patois of the Great Smokey Mountains now as it was then. She remains proud of her heritage and enjoys recalling her modest beginnings.

"My beginnings made me what I am," she said during a stop in Hollywood on her way to Japan.

"I grew up barefooted wearing hand-me-down clothes made from scraps. We slept four to a bed and were as poor as Job's turkey. Dad was a moonshiner who turned to tobacco farming. All us kids worked the fields.

"We grew all our own food and moved from one shack to another. We never had anything but outdoor toilets. If you had a two-holer, you was rich.

"I'm proud of my background because I know the value of money and the meaning of truth and love.

"I'm from a very religious family. They used to call us Holy Rollers. We'd go to church and sing, making joyful noise for the Lord. That's how I begun singin'. I'm still religious."

Dolly began making up songs when she was 5, her mother writing them down for her. She says she's written thousands of ditties and reckons that a least a thousand of them have been recorded.

Her albums now outsell almost all other country singers. Here You Come Again sold a million copies and won Dolly the Grammy award. Her latest album, Great Balls of Fire, will easily surpass it.

Married to farmer Carl Dean for 13 years, Dolly's home is a 250-acre spread on the outskirts of Nashville. She recently spent three months, mostly barefoot, on the farm "getting back to basics and to restore myself."

The contrast between her farm girl roots and busty Dolly seen on TV is a source of delight to the singer.

"I may look a little phony but down deep where it counts, I'm all there," she said. "I never felt ordinary.

"The best way to draw attention to myself was to get a gimmick. That's why I wear them wigs, flashy clothes and gaudy jewelry. I feel comfortable with gaudy things and bright colors. The more extreme I get the more comfortable I feel.

"There's a magic in looking one way and being just the opposite inside. It's like a self-inflicted fairy tale. Now that people know me, they get behind the image and listen to my songs.

"Thing is, I'm a real natural blonde. But I like the platinum wigs and the high heels. Makes me look tall. I'm only 5 feet so I gotta do something.

"It baffles me when people say I'm a sex symbol, I just try to look as pretty as I can. I'd rather folks like me as a person first, second for my talent. And if there's any other reasons, that's a bonus."

Victoria host for national music festival conference

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

How strong is the music festival movement in Canada?

The answer — that it is a big vital and influential force — is to be found in the all-Canada representation currently discussing festival matters in Victoria.

Sixty delegates from all 10 provinces and many cities in Canada are here attending a three-day conference of the Federation of Canadian Music Festivals. The number includes an observer from Quebec which has its own separate program, as well as full representation from provinces of the Atlantic seaboard.

In the midst of a two-year term as president of the Federation, Victoria's Dr. J.F.K. English is chairing the conference.

Competitive music festivals were a concept transported from England at the beginning of the century.

They have been an annual event in Canada for approximately 75 years, but it was not until 1949 that they were nationally organized in the association now known as the Federation of Canadian Music Festivals.

In an address to the delegates at a dinner hosted by the Province of B.C., Monday, Allan Turner, associate deputy minister of culture, heritage and recreation, outlined the history of the movement and its growth.

He pointed out that there are now some 200 festivals affiliated with the Federation and that during the festival period between February and late May, more than 100,000 competitors participate.

When teachers, festival personnel, adjudicators and parents are added, it is apparent that close to one million persons are affected directly or indirectly, it was pointed out.

Every province has several festivals going on in different communities each year and the Federation encourages the development wherever the community is large enough to support a festival.

All the provinces except Quebec have a provincial festival which sends, in its turn, adjudicator-chosen representatives to the National Finals in Toronto.

The annual conferences provide sounding boards for ideas for provincial and local festivals thus helping to improve standards and procedures for individual festivals.

Entertainment following the dinner was provided by Victoria tenor Richard Margison, who sang a group of songs, accompanying himself on the guitar. Margison, who recently won the provincial senior vocal class will represent B.C. at the National Finals in September.

Choral trophies, which are judged on the basis of submitted tapes, have already been awarded and the winners, as announced Monday, are the Laura Secord Secondary Choir of Vineland, Ont., awarded the George S. Mathieson Trophy, and the Halifax Chamber Choir which won the City of Lincoln Trophy.

Runners-up were the Churchill High School Girls Choir of Winnipeg and the Melod-y-Aires of Sarnia, Ont.

The conference, which is taking place at the Imperial Inn, ends Wednesday.

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market fell sharply in active trading today.

Declines outnumbered advances 218 to 146 with 226 issues unchanged.

Trading resumed in Cenex Ltd. at 1 p.m. following a halt last Friday.

The company said negotiations for a $1.36-million loan are in progress and conditional commitments have been made for $400,000.

The funds will be placed in escrow with a court in Saskatchewan to enable release of a mechanics lien claim placed against Cenex by Mining Corp. of Canada Ltd. Cenex's stock fell five cents to $2.00 by shortly after 1 p.m.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market pulled back today, pausing after the rally of the past two sessions.

Among Canadian issues on the New York Stock Exchange, McIntyre Mines dropped ½ to $41½, Campbell Red Lake ¼ to $19¼ and Bell Canada ⅛ to $18⅜.

Seagram rose ½ to $30⅛ and Massey Ferguson ½ to $13½.

London

LONDON (Reuter) — The London stock market rose sharply near the close of light trading today. The Financial Times index was up 6.5 to 475.2. Industrials, oils and banks firmed while golds eased. Canadian shares advanced.

Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices were mixed in light-to-moderate trading on the Montreal Stock Exchange today.

Decision to move 'understandable'

MONTREAL (CP) — The decision of Pratt and Whitney Aircraft of Canada Ltd. to move part of its engineering department to Toronto from Montreal is understandable in light of the predominance of the English language in the international aviation industry, says the president of the Quebec Order of Engineers.

"Aerospace technology is essentially English throughout the world," Micheline Bouchard said in an interview. "Even the Russians learn English to be able to read American and British technical publications."

The aerospace industry is highly competitive, she said, and favorable conditions must exist if Quebec wishes to retain it.

"Without trying to politicize the debate, it is necessary to have your feet on the ground and recognize the facts," Mrs. Bouchard said.

Pratt and Whitney, an engine manufacturer located in the Montreal suburb of Longueil, recently announced that, of 400 engineering jobs to be created in Toronto, 200 would be filled by employees now working in Montreal.

The company's president, Donald Lowe, said the move was a "humanitarian gesture" to employees.

NORMAN GILCHRIST WINES

Ulrich (Uli) Reichardt

Robert B. O'Callaghan, Manager, Norman Gilchrist Wines, is pleased to announce the promotion of Ulrich (Uli) Reichardt to the position of Senior Wine Consultant. Montreal to N.Y. move for bankers

MONTREAL (CP) — The Royal Bank of Canada plans to move most of its U.S. operations to New York from Montreal within the next few months to strengthen its position south of the border, bank spokesman Rae Turley said today.

Miss Turley said about 10 executives in the bank's U.S. division, ranging from vice-president to support staff, would be affected by the move.

Miss Turley said the move was part of a decentralization program that has been underway at the bank for several years and "people shouldn't read any more into it." She noted the bank relocated its European operations to London in 1972.

"As you know, we see the U.S. as our number one international market so we just want to have our people stay closer to the whole thing."

The Royal Bank recently opened its first branch in the U.S., in Portland, Ore., and has more than half a dozen representative offices in the U.S. It plans to open two more representative offices in Denver and Pittsburgh later this month.

Miss Turley described as "premature" a published report that the bank is also planning to move its Caribbean and Latin American operations to Miami from Montreal, but acknowledged that such a move is being considered.

Business

Trizec

Trizec Corp. Ltd. has reported profit for the six months ended April 30, 1979, of $5.5 million, or 34 cents a share, up from $4.2 million, or 31 cents a share, for the same period last year.

The Montreal-based real estate holding and management firm also announced revenue for the period increased to $107.3 million from $96.7 million last year.

Slater Steel

Slater Steel Industries Ltd. expects to increase profits 15 per cent this year over the $11.1 million or $4.16 a share earned in 1978, president Bruce Hamilton told the annual meeting.

"I know there's supposed to a recession later this year, but so far we haven't seen any real signs of it," said Hamilton.

He said the Hamilton-based company has orders for several months to come and all divisions are operating at full capacity.

People's

People's Jewellers Ltd. increased profits for the nine months ending May 26 to $6,436,000 or $1.99 a share from $4,642,000 or $1.52 a share a year ago, the company reported.

Hiram Walker-Gooderham and Worts Ltd. reported profits of $19,536,000 (U.S.) or $1.13 a share for the three months ending May 31, compared with $16,086,000 or 93 cents a share for the same period last year.

The distillery said sales declined off in the period from last year, but profits were up because of lower income tax rates and favorable foreign exchange rates.

Argos Promise no Cup in July

Times News Services

Even if Toronto Argonauts upset Montreal Alouettes in their Canadian Football League season opener at Toronto tonight they promise they will not claim the Grey Cup in July.

"All I came here to do was improve the team," says Forrest Gregg, Argos new head coach. "I don't want to go on record saying we'll win the Grey Cup. What I am saying is that this football team will be improved."

While the old gag about the Argos winning the CFL championship in July and losing it November may have to be dropped, the Argos are still underdogs against the defending Eastern Conference champion Alouettes in tonight's opener at Exhibition Stadium.

The CBC western network will televise tonight's other league opener from Winnipeg where the defending Grey Cup-champion Edmonton Eskimos meet the Blue Bombers.

The opening-week schedule continues Wednesday night with Hamilton Tiger-Cats visiting Ottawa Rough Riders and British Columbia Lions against Saskatchewan Roughriders at Regina.

Edmonton will start four Canadians on the offensive line against Winnipeg but Eskimo quarterbacks Tom Wilkinson and Warren Moon aren't worried.

"In the exhibition season they were really good," Wilkinson said. "I never got sacked once."

The starting quarterback for the defending Grey Cup champions said the experience and playing ability of offensive tackle Charlie Turner, who retired last week, will be missed "but the offensive line has been doing a really good job."

"Sure there's going to be occasions when we don't have as much time as in other games, but then you'll just have to adjust your play selection," he said.

Moon said he doesn't care whether four Canadians or four Americans play in front of him.

"Coach (Hugh) Campbell has done a pretty good job assessing talent. If he thinks they can play so do I."

Moon said the quarterback dictates the play of the offensive line. "If he can keep the defensive line off balance with his play selection it'll be a lot easier on the offensive line."

As for the Bombers, head coach Ray Jauch made some last-minute roster changes for the game. The club declared a 32-man roster Friday, one short of the league requirement but also brought in five more players for a trial.

On Monday, Bombers deleted non-import rookie slot back Chris Davies and added two non-import players to the roster. Defensive back Steve Gelly was obtained from Montreal Alouettes and linebacker Tom Schultz was added after he was released by British Columbia Lions.

Bill Troup, former backup quarterback for Baltimore Colts of National Football League, will be the new backup to starting quarterback Dieter Brock.

Juantorena defeated; Diane retains crown

By SCOTT ABBOTT

SAN JUAN (CP) — Before track and field competition began at the Pan-American Games, it was almost an article of faith all over San Juan that Olympic champion Alberto Juantorena would win the men's 800 metres.

But the legendary Cuban, who ran the world's top half-milers into the ground in Montreal two years ago, proved human Monday as James Robinson of the United States shadowed him all the way and outkicked him to win by one-tenth of a second.

"He's fast at the end and I'm fast at the end," Robinson said. "I figured I had a pretty good chance of beating him. I heard he's been having a little back problem. To me, it's a very satisfying win because I consider him the greatest half-miler in the world."

Robinson still had to contend with a protest from Jamaican runner Owen Hamilton, who complained that the American had bumped him early in the race. But the referee and the appeal jury, after deliberating for nearly three hours, upheld Robinson's contention that the Jamaican had drifted out of his lane.

The winning time of 1:46.3 broke the Games record of 1:47.98 set four years ago by Luis Medina of Cuba.

Other track and field events Monda provided a showcase for defending Pan-Am champions.

Diane Jones Konihowski had no trouble reclaiming the pentathlon gold medal she won at Mexico City in 1975 and Maria Tarria of Cuba repeated in the women's shot put, brekking her own Games record in the process.

And Brazilian Joao Carlos de Oliveira, already a double gold medallist in the long jump, defended a second title in the triple jump.

Carmen Ionesco of Montreal earned a bronze medal in the women's shot to go with her third-place finish in the discus and Jill Ross of London, Ont., placed third behind Konihowski and Jodi Anderson of the U.S. in the pentathlon.

Americans Essie Kelley and Julie Brown finished virtually side by side in the women's 800 as Anne Mackie Morelli of Coquitlam, B.C., missed the bronze medal by less than one second.

Canada picked up two gold and four bronze medals in Greco-Roman wrestling as defending-champion Howard Stupp of Laval, Que., won the lightweight class and featherweight Doug Yeats of Montreal also headed his division. Four Americans and four Cubans won the other titles.

The Canadian bronze medallists were welterweight Brian Renken and light heavyweight Steve Daniar of Thunder Bay, Ont., and middleweight Louis Santerre of Montreal.

Commonwealth Games champion Marc Cardinal of Ottawa won all three silver medals in super heavyweight weightlifting as the U.S. lifters, shut out in eight previous divisions, finished off the competition with a sweep of the last six golds by heavyweight Brad Rheingans and super heavyweight Arturo Diaz.

The cycling program ended with the 170-kilometre road race, in which Cuban Carlos Garpet nipped Bernardo Colex of Colombia in a blanket finish. The top Canadian, Normand St-Aubin of Roxboro, Que., was ninth.

Budgets blank Antilles

SAN JUAN — Cliff Bishop of Winnipeg followed the no-hitting trend Monday by hurling Victoria Budgets to a shortened 10-0 decision over Netherlands Antilles in the men's softball portion of the Pan-American Games.

Wendy Barlow of Victoria was less successful in the women's tennis competition.

The third straight no-hit performance boosted Canada's record to 6-1. Mark Smith threw a no-hitter Saturday and Rob Guenter, the other pitcher added to the Victoria roster from Saskatchewan, followed suit Sunday.

Budgets struck fast for two runs in the first inning and eight in the second and then held on to win the game shortened to five innings because of the 10-run rule.

Bishop allowed only two walks while recording the win and Reg Underwood did the maximum amount of damage by smashing a three-run homer.

Carl Walker contributed a triple to the attack while Bob Holness and Mike Henderson, a recruit from Nova Scotia, stroked doubles.

Barlow wilted in the searing heat and suffocating humidity after battling back from a near-sweep by Tracy Lewis of the United States.

Lewis won the first set 6-1 and was leading 5-2 in the second before Barlow rallied to win 7-6 in the tie-breaker. Then, exhausted and with blistered feet, she was unable to stop a 6-1 win by Lewis in the deciding set.

Erroneous reports from San Juan had Barlow in the finals but the Monday loss turned out to be in the quarter-final round.

Barlow and Joseph Brabanec of Vancouver are still alive in the mixed doubles segment of the competition.

Bauman's double topples Mussels

Catcher Brad Bauman smashed a bases-loaded double to knock in two runs Monday night and lead Salem Senators to a 5-3 win over the Victoria Mussels in Northwest League baseball action at Athletic Park.

Bauman's hard lineshot over third base came with two out in the 10th inning in a game delayed for three-quarters of an hour by rain.

Victoria carried a 3-2 lead into the seventh inning when the Senators tied it up.

In the ninth, the Mussels loaded the bases but were unable to take advantage of the situation when Salem pulled off a double play.

Emil Drzayich smashed a two-run homer in the third inning after Doug Morganti's two-out RBI single produced Victoria's first run in the second frame.

Singles by Tom Moore in the first and third innings produced the first two Salem runs.

Salem	101 000 100 2—5	8	2

Welcome relief

Some outstanding relief pitching by Randy Strandlund made the difference Monday night as Farmer Construction defeated Cosmopolitans 8-5 in a Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League game at Lambrick Park.

Strandlund, who is 3-0 since a mid-season shift from softball to baseball, struck out two, walked two and allowed no hits after relieving starter Wayne Krimmer in the fifth inning.

Ian Hood led the attack for Farmers with three hits in five trips to score twice. Mike Lawless was two-for-three and drove in one run while Mike Baier went two-for-four and drove in another run.

GOLF

Crawford well supplied with golfing credentials

One goal left in Lyle Crawford's golf bag is the British Columbia seniors championship. That's because a victory there will complete something of a full circle for Cedar Hill's new head professional.

Lyle got the Cedar Hill job last week, but he'll have to wait a few years before he can go chasing after the senior title. Only 46, Crawford will concentrate on "finding" himself in a job that has been his on a pro-tem basis for more than a month.

The guessing game since May has been: "who will replace Bill Goldsworthy?" Crawford's name came up, but usually as a contender and not a front-runner. This has been surprising because he has been a part of the Cedar Hill picture for more than a year, as Goldsworthy's right hand man and the main supplier of stock in the pro shop.

Lyle was aware of his position.

"After Goldie resigned," he told me some time ago, "I think some of the members thought it was my doing. But it wasn't . . ."

Crawford will be happy to know that he drew his support from the members who counted — the directors. The Municipality of Saanich made its decision "mainly because of the recommendation of the board of directors," said recreation director Bill Young.

So congratulations are in order and Cedar Hill is getting a man who has left his mark in provincial golf.

Crawford has won every B.C. men's title one can win, with the exception of the seniors championship. He won the men's amateur twice, the B.C. Open in 1959 and five times claimed the provincial (open) matchplay championship in the days the Times Island Open winner was sent against the Vancouver Sun's matchplay champion.

And he came ever-so-close to winning a national title. That was in 1955, in Calgary. He lost in the final to the inimitable Moe Norman on the 39th hole.

Uplands members did themselves proud last year, and it looks like they'll do even better this year.

Last year, Uplands raised approximately $5,000 for the B.C. Heart Foundation. The second annual invitational will be held Aug. 5, and co-chairman Gord Pellow and Ken Little are anticipating a greater donation. The signs are there. Entries are rapidly approaching the limit and prize chairman Bill Kirby has assembled an outstanding array of giveaways, including a trip to Hawaii.

Three years ago, Uplands was host to a celebrity tournament designed to aid the same cause. Despite an apparently-successful tournament, the donation to the Heart Fund was an embarassment to some members and most directors, mainly because some outside promises were never kept.

It would have been easy, as suggested at the time, to drop the cause.

Instead, the Uplands gang, keeping all controls in their hands, introduced the new invitational. The result was an example of what a strong committee, following thoughtful direction, can do.

BRIEFLY: Like Gorge Vale, Uplands has dropped the match-play format for its club championship . . . I'm sorry, because I still remain a match-play freak . . . At any rate, the Uplands chase starts July 14 . . . The Hamber Cup is a club team competition among players in the B.C. Amateur . . . Gorge Vale didn't win it at Kelowna last week because the Esquimalt club was without entry . . . Dave Donaldson and Stu Holroyd were the only Gorge Vale entrants, and it takes four to make a team . . . Gorge Vale was runnerup in each of the past two years, and if it is of any consolation to Leo Derman, 1979 simply is the low point of the cycle.

Nothing is going right for Royals

By Canadian Press

The problem, as George Brett sees it, is that when Kansas City gets the pitching, it doesn't get the hitting — and the Royals haven't been getting much pitching lately.

"We just can't keep the ball in the ballpark lately," Royals manager Whitey Herzog said Monday night after Cleveland Indians launched four pitches over the fence to rout Kansas City 8-2 and saddle Herzog's Royals with their ninth loss in their last 10 American League starts. Kansas City pitchers have given up 44 homers in the last 24 games.

In the rest of the American League, California Angels beat Boston Red Sox 6-0 and took a one-half game West Division lead over Texas Rangers, who lost 5-4 to Chicago White Sox. Baltimore Orioles widened their East Division margin to three games over Boston by downing Oakland A's 7-3, while Minnesota Twins defeated Detroit Tigers 5-3 and Toronto Blue Jays beat Milwaukee Brewers 7-1.

"The losing streak is a combination of everything," said Brett, the Royals' all-star third baseman. "When we get the pitching, we don't get the hitting. When we get the hitting, we don't get the pitching. Whenever a team is in a slump, that sort of thing happens. But we're still playing fundamentally good baseball."

Frank White, though, sees it differently — psychologically.

"We're getting behind early and we can't be as aggressive as we want," the Kansas City second baseman said. "I think when a team is losing. the tendency is for every individual to put too much pressure on himself. It causes problems."

While Bobby Bonds, Andre Thornton, Mike Hargrove and Toby Harrah were hitting the homers that dropped fourth-place Kansas City 6½ games behind California, the Indians' David Clyde was hurling a five-hitter for his second victory without a defeat and his first complete game of the season.

"It's a lot of fun to be a pitcher and not just a thrower," Clyde said.

Stampede jobs going begging

CALGARY (CP) — It seems many Calgary teenagers think the Stampede is no longer the place to earn extra dollars.

There are more than 100 jobs lying idle at different points within the exhibition grounds.

"We'll obviously fill some of the vacancies, but just as quickly as we do that others will become vacant as people quit," said Toni De Meo, a Manpower official.

De Meo said the shortage of workers likely is linked to the fact that most of the booths at the Stampede midway and fair offer no more than the minimum hourly wage of $2.85 for persons under 18 and $3.00 for those over age 18.

She said most of it is hard work and a lot of the younger teenagers cannot stand the heat and the pressure.

"They're the ones, the people around 16, who don't last the full 10 days," she said.

De Meo added that Calgary has a low unemployment rate and jobs in the city usually pay better than the Stampede midway or booths.

Jobless hits 2½-year low

ployment rate of 8.5 per cent. As the new year began, the rate was just above eight per cent and has now dropped by another half a per cent.

Newfoundland, as always, reported the highest unemployment rate — 15.5 per cent — more than double the national average.

Among those 15 to 24 years old, the unemployment rate was almost five per cent higher than the national average at 12.4 per cent. The rate for young men was 11.5 per cent and for young women was 13.6 per cent.

Many economists in Canada and the United States say the improvement in both country's job creation rates is unlikely to last much longer. They forecast higher energy prices will force some industries to curtail production to control their power costs and suggest the unemployment rate could rise by as much as two per cent by the end of the year.

Province-by-provinces unemployment rates were:

—British Columbia, 7.7 per cent compared with 8.3 per cent in May.

—Alberta, 4.1 per cent, unchanged from the previous month.

—Saskatchewan, 3.9 per cent compared with 4.4 per cent in May.

—Manitoba, 5.3 per cent compared with 5.9 per cent in May.

—Ontario, 6.6 per cent unchanged from the previous month.

—Quebec, 9.5 per cent compared with 9.8 per cent in May.

—New Brunswick, 10.8 per centompared with 11.0 per cent in May.

—Nova Scotia, 9.0 per cent compared with 9.4 per cent in May.

—Prince Edward Island, 12.1 per cent compared with 11.4 per cent in May.

—Newfoundland, 15.5 per cent compared with 16.4 per cent in May.

Buttle Lake hiker dead

A search in the Buttle Lake area of Strathcona Park ended Monday with the discovery of the body of a missing hiker.

A rescue spokesman said the body of Donnanm Peppar, 39, of Vancouver, missing since Thursday, was located at the 4,500-foot level of bluffs east of Henshaw Creek.

Peppar, described as an inexperienced hiker, became separated from his party in the park, police said.

Navy League names new executive

Pat Walker of Sidney is the new president of the Navy League of Canada's Vancouver Island division.

First vice-president is Kjell Pedersen of Port Alberni. Henk Razenberg is second vice-president and Bill Ross is treasurer.

Navy Leaguers from across the island will be at Comox on Friday for Navy League Day at HMCS Quadra, the summer training establishment for Royal Canadian Sea Cadets.

Events start at 8:30 a.m.

The cadets will be inspected by Gerry Cairns of Saskatchewan, deputy national chairman of the sea cadet committee.

Thatcher to curb U.K. unions

By LEONARD DOWNIE
Washington Post

LONDON — Fulfilling another of her campaign promises, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher Monday unveiled her proposals for curbing the legal power of Britain's labor unions.

Secondary picketing, a common tactic in strikes here, would be outlawed. Unions would also lose the legal protection they now have against being sued for breach of contract if their members strike while a labor contract is still in force.

Closed shops, which are widespread in Britain, would be more difficult to create. Under a detailed statutory "code of practice," which could be used as the basis for court appeals against closed shops, an employee workforce made up totally of union members could be created "only with the wholehearted support of the workers covered."

New legal rights and government financial protection would be given to workers who lose their jobs because they refuse to join a union out of "deeply held personal convictions," even in closed shops. Only "genuine religious beliefs" are an acceptable legal reason for refusing to join a union in a closed shop here now.

Secret ballots for union elections, rules changes and strike authorizations would be encouraged by government grants to pay the postage for mail ballots. Thatcher claimed during the recent election campaign that many trade union members decided to support her because they felt they were being forced by undemocratic union procedures to obey the leadership of extremist militants.

Thatcher's proposals were made in a group of parliamentary working papers on which formal legislative proposals will be based after consultations with union and business leaders. Thatcher's Conservatives have a sufficient majority in Parliament to push through the changes in whatever final form they take.

"We intend these working papers to provide the basis for full and detailed consultation over the next two to three months before final decisions are taken," said Thatcher's employment secretary, James Prior.

Animal lover William Valliere and his new family

Breath of life for skunk

TORONTO (CP) — Pet-store owner William Valliere believes any animal's life is worth saving — even if that means giving mouth-to-mouth resuscitation to a skunk.

Last week a Toronto woman found a family of skunks under her veranda and was referred by the Toronto Humane Society to Valliere, 40-year-old founder of the Sanctuary for Endangered Animals.

Valliere flushed out five baby skunks with a garden hose but the last appeared to be dead.

"I applied mouth-mouth resuscitation for about 20 minutes," he said, adding that even the young animal had the familiar skunky odor. Th skunk survived.

He plans to keep them until they are strong enough to be released into the woods.

'You've just been zapped by 14,000 volts'

Salt Spring does its disaster number

By PAUL MINVIELLE
Times Staff

Part-time ambulance driver Randy Sloan is glad he's alive today. And he's probably wondering what it would have been like if the three-car crash on Salt Spring Island Monday night had been the real thing.

In theory, Sloan died when he tried to reach a victim trapped in a car. In his eagerness to help, Sloan neglected to look around, and he didn't see the wire hanging from a hydro pole.

Bob Hudson, a training officer with the Emergency Health Services Commission, told Sloan he'd just been zapped by 14,000 volts. With a disgusted groan, Sloan slumped to the ground, still clutching the car door handle.

"Your partner's dead," Hudson yelled at Garry Garras, another part-time ambulance attendant and one of several who help unit chief Bill Simpkin provide the 4,400 residents of Salt Spring with ambulance service. Although all the island's full and part-time emergency staff knew an exercise was coming, the exact date was a secret.

Garras was horrified. He found himself faced with an ambulance attendant's nightmare, and even though he knew it was all staged, he realized that some day he might find himself faced with just such a situation.

He headed for the ambulance and radioed the dispatcher in Victoria. He requested an extra ambulance, police and the fire department.

Once satisfied that extra help was on the way, Garras turned his attention back to the scene.

It wasn't pretty, as Hudson and his wife, Pat, who has just returned to her job as an operating room nurse at Victoria General Hospital after a two-year stint with the provincial air ambulance, had done a superb job of making the accident victims' injuries appear gruesome. Chicken, beef and lamb bones, modeling clay and red liquid were transformed into broken limbs, spurting arteries and torn flesh.

Pancake makeup changed normally pink cheeks to deathly pallor, a sign of shock. A jagged piece of glass jutted from one victim's cheek.

Garras began to assess the victims, rallying help from passersby, many of whom didn't realize until told that the whole affair was staged.

One such bystander was told to hold a pressure bandage on the stump of a leg. For purposes of the exercise, victim Dave Hoskin was supposed to have suffered an amputation in the accident. In reality, Hoskin is an amputee who lost his leg as a paratrooper in France in the Second World War.

"You realize that this is a simulation, don't you?" Hoskin asked the man holding the bandage to the stump where his right leg should be.

The man's shoulders slumped in relief.

"Thank God," he said fervently.

In the meantime, other help began to arrive. An RCMP officer pulled up in his cruiser. The officer approached the car with a victim inside and ambulance driver Sloan still clutching the door handle. The officer put both hands on the roof of the car and leaned forward. He too got the unhappy word from the training officer that 14,000 volts were now coursing their theoretical way through his body.

Garras was still alone, but in the distance could be heard the sirens of the Salt Spring Volunteer Fire Department and a second ambulance.

Victim Vonnie Butler screamed when anyone approached her. In the background a car burned fiercely, exploding the windows.

"Don't touch me," she yelled at an ambulance attendant.

The attendant was taken aback for a moment, but in a moment was talking quietly to Butler, soothing her pretended fears.

At Lady Minto Gulf Islands Hospital, doctors and nurses did their best to cope with the unaccustomed flood of victims. A real disaster would stretch the facilities of the 25-bed unit, but the mock disaster was a chance to test emergency procedures.

Victim Aaron Minvielle, a 14-year-old freed from an upturned vehicle by the fire department, was in the operating room with an open broken femur. His father entered the room, yelling at Dr. Ernest Jarman to leave his child alone. He said that for religious reasons he didn't want his boy to be treated, and he threatened to sue if any treatment, especially a transfusion, was administered.

At this point, hospital administrator Malcolm Pinteau stepped into the room and tried to calm the father. But the father refused to sign anything or be put aside.

Pinteau finally informed the man that the situation was an emergency and that the child would be treated.

"If necessary, we'll have the child made a ward of the court and he will be treated. If you try to interfere, you'll be forcibly removed by the RCMP."

The man finally left when a friend pushed him into the hallway.

All treatments that could be administered by the hospital were done, and arrangements were made to transport the most seriously hurt victims to Victoria, with the alternatives of planes, helicopters and the Fulford Harbor ferry to Swartz Bay considered.

The exercise petered out at that point, some two hours after a passerby was told to phone an ambulance from the nearest phone. Ambulance, police, fire department and hospital officials met this morning, and recommendations to improve procedures will be made in coming weeks.

"I'm glad we had this," commented one part-time ambulance driver as he sipped a drink later in the evening. "You can bet I'll be a helluva lot more careful when I approach any car at an accident scene."

Sloan, still shaking off the effects of his mock electrocution, nodded vigorous agreement.

TOWN TALK

What if you called an oil port hearing and nobody — well almost nobody — came?

That's the problem looming for Capital Regional District board chairman Murray Glazier, who arranged an information hearing for Friday on a proposed oil port for Port Angeles.

The Times learned today that of the three federal and four provincial politicians invited by Glazier only one is likely to be present and even he — Environment Minister Rafe Mair — is iffy.

The other provincial ministers invited — Lands Minister Jim Chabot, Economic Development Minister Don Phillips and Transport Minister Alex Fraser — are expected to be tied up with house business and certain no-shows are Transport Minister Don Mazankowski, Fisheries and Oceans Minister Jim McGrath and Environment Minister John Fraser.

Glazier earlier stipulated, because of the size limitation of the regional district's board room in its Yates Street headquarters, that the hearing be by invitation only.

Looks like there might be room after all.

There are faithful dogs and faithful dogs but Cody, 10 pounds of feisty Boston Terrier, is something else again.

Just ask the two policemen who recently helped out Madge Ratcliffe of 3014 Cedar Hill.

Madge was out for a walk with Cody when she was knocked down from behind — police believe by some boisterous teen-agers — and ended up unconscious on the sidewalk.

Help was called but when the two unidentified policemen moved in to try and help, Cody, with his mistress flat out, wasn't having any.

Cody, all fangs and fierceness, stood off the would be good-Samaritan officers and ambulance attendants for 10 snarly minutes until the long arm of the law (with a rope attached), ended his defiance.

With the rope around his neck and a policeman pushing from the rear, Cody was finally bundled into a police cruiser and Madge whisked off to hospital for six stitches and a few days to recover.

The economic development ministry is forking out $8,000 to a consulting firm for a study into the market potential of rabbit meat.

The Rabbit Producers Association of B.C. says output im the industry has dropped to the point where rabbits are being brought in from Washington State.

Can bunny burgers be far away?

Nothing's official yet but it sounds as if Dr. Bob Stewart, world-renowned director of the Institute of Oceanography at Pat Bay, has been working out some sort of deal with Education Minister Pat McGeer.

McGeer's ministerial assistant Glen Mitchell admits the department is looking at its whole science and technology area and that about two weeks ago the minister had dinner with Stewart.

While there is a possibility that Stewart could become involved in some new departmental program, Mitchell said everything is very preliminary.

An informed source told The Times that because of his discussions with McGeer, Stewart has cancelled plans to leave at the end of September on a six-month sabbatical to Australia.

Stewart is in Capetown, South Africa, for the month.

That Esquimalt Lions Club appeal for funds to help the victims of that big apartment fire on Colville earlier this year raised a total of $3,250.

Club spokesman Allan McKenzie said the Four Square Gospel Church donated $437.50, St. Paul's Church $100, private sources kicked in $25 and the club itself came up with $2,687.50 to help out the families who lost their homes and in many cases, all their possessions.

All of the cash went to the people who really needed it, says McKenzie, and the Lions want to say a big thanks to everyone involved.

Inspectors join union

A long-standing union-management dispute over the status of police inspectors has been resolved, Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier said today.

All six inspectors will technically become union members with full bargaining rights while retaining their supervisory role, Couvelier said.

A compromise agreement between the Saanich Police Board and the Saanich Police Association was signed today.

Briefs by both sides to the Labor Relations Board have been withdrawn.

Only two police inspectors are members of the union.

The association has been trying to get the other four inspectors back into the union since they were excluded by a 1976 Labor Relations Board ruling.

The board maintained inspectors, because of their supervisory role, should belong to management.

"It was a clear conflict of interest," Couvelier said today.

Under the new agreement all inspectors will pay union dues and receive full benefits, but they will be restricted from participation in union business.

Couvelier says he believes it is a unique solution to the problem.

The inspectors are exempt from attending union meetings, sitting on union committees or holding union office.

They are also exempt from any penalties imposed by the union for non-involvement.

Drivers vote on strike

About 300 Victoria bus drivers and other B.C. Hydro workers took a strike vote today after the first round of wage negotiations ended in a stalemate.

Vancouver members of the Amalgamated Transit Union voted Monday but results have not been announced.

The ATU is expected to apply for a mediator even if the strike vote passes.

The union represents a total of 3,300 Hydro drivers, mechanics and other workers.

Latest corporation offer was 5.25 per cent in each of two years while the ATU was asking for 10 per cent in a one-year pact.

62% increase in property sales

Victoria real estate sales under the Multiple Listing Service totalled $26.5 million in June, a 62 per cent increase over the same month last year.

The figures, released today by the Victoria Real Estate Board, represent the most dramatic upswing in the local housing market since the boom years of 1973-74.

There were 405 properties, houses and commercial buildings sold during June, up from 277 last June.

The board said the recovery which began earlier this year has picked up steam month by month.

Prices have also started to move upwards in response to the increased demand.

Board president Bev Highton said vendors now are getting about 95 per cent of their asking prices.

The board estimates that housing prices have increased between six and eight per cent over the past year, with most of the rise coming in the past three months.

The average MLS selling price in June was $68,370, up 11 per cent from $61,550 the previous June. But the figures include all properties sold, including land and commercial structures.

For houses alone, the average price was $68,100, up 6.8 per cent from $64,100.

This figure is also just a rough guide, Highton said.

(Earlier, Royal Trust computed Victoria's housing price increase at eight per cent during the past year, and the figure is generally accepted).

Highton said the strength in the local market arrived with spring. There had been a definite but smaller upsurge earlier in the year.

The board's six-month figures show a total of $118 million worth of property has been sold under MLS in the Victoria area to the end of June, up 38.4 per cent from $85 million in the same period last year. There were 1,725 sales, up 24.6 per cent from 1,384.

About two thirds of all re-sale homes are listed under MLS. The other 33 per cent are sold under exclusive listings and those figures are not publicized. Most new houses are sold under exclusive listings.

Highton said that while demand is up dramatically, the supply of homes is down from last year.

There were 4,427 properties listed during the first half of 1978 and only 4,154 in the same period this year. Properties listed during June totalled 722, down from 745 last June.

The trend will put additional pressure on the housing market for the balance of the year unless the supply increases, Highton said.

Tree bylaw okayed despite protests

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

A controversial tree protection bylaw aimed mainly at controlling logging in rural areas drew complaints from residents but was approved by Saanich council's protective services committee Monday.

The committee will recommend council amend the bylaw to include a provision for the emergency removal of hazardous trees in restricted areas.

Under the bylaw, property owners must apply for permits before removing trees in areas designated restricted.

Several Saanich residents, including a spokesmen for the Saanich Farmers Institute, objected to the restrictive wording of portions of the bylaw.

Hugh McGregor, 5348 Alderley, said he was speaking on behalf of a group of citizens concerned the permit procedure violates their right to determine the use of trees on their property.

He said the bylaw appears to give too much power to municipal officials.

McGregor and other residents criticized the bylaw because it doesn't have an appeal procedure.

The committee was told the bylaw poses an inconvenience to people who want to remove one or two trees.

Ald. David Paterson said council can amend the bylaw in the future if problems arise.

"The main thrust of the bylaw is to deal with severe cases of blatant disregard for trees," he said.

Municipal solicitor Chris Nation pointed out the bylaw will affect only a small number of Saanich residents.

Permits are only required to cut individual trees along ocean frontage where trees are needed for soil erosion control.

Individual tree cutting will also be restricted along flood plains, within a 10-metre strip along lakes, streams and inland waters and on steep terrain.

The bylaw defines logging as the cutting of more than 10 trees a year on one parcel of land.

Nation said the logging regulation applies only to land outside the urban containment area and to three specified areas inside the boundary.

In those restricted areas up to 10 trees can be cut without a permit. Cutting of additional trees must be for thinning, agricultural or horticultural use, construction of a building or for a public works project.

Bill McKechnie, another member of the farm institute, said the municipality can't control what people do on their own property even if they make a mess.

"Indiscriminate logging may create an ugly mess, but it's not permanent," McKechnie said.

He said cutting doesn't cause any real damage because trees grow back in 10 or 20 years.

As a member of the agricultural community, McKechnie said he does not want to have to run for a permit every time he wants to do something on his property.

Cutting trees on steep slopes is often necessary on agricultural land to allow the sun to get through to the crops, he said.

He said the bylaw is a hasty attempt to remedy an unfortunate situation.

Logging of a 7.6-acre property adjacent to Mount Douglas Park on Cordova Bay Road prompted aldermen to move quickly with the draft bylaw.

Helping hand offered

Saanich's new marine rescue unit should volunteer to lend a helping hand outside municipal boundaries, the protective services committee will recommend to council.

It will recommend the fire department's new fully-equipped 16-foot Zodiac be used to respond to emergencies that occur outside Saanich's 40 miles of coastline.

Fire chief Art Fryer told the committee Monday the department should aid the Rescue Co-ordination Centre and the Coast Guard during marine emergencies, even though both services made it clear they don't intend to pay for the help.

The fire department should establish the service and evaluate it after one year.

Then the municipality would be in a position to ask for costs necessary to keep the craft operating outside boundaries, Fryer said.

Current offshore responsibility extends 1,000 feet from shore inside Saanich's north and south boundaries. The RCC also responds to rescue calls inside municipal boundaries.

The department's increased assistance would probably stretch no further north than the northern end of James Island and could extend south below the Saanich boundary.

The frequency of RCC's requests to Saanich would depend on the number of other boats in the area available to respond to a rescue call.

YOUTH CLINIC

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel of experts: Marion Powell, medical doctor; Graham Cotter, clergyman; Dr. Saul Levine, psychiatrist, and Bruce Vichert, social worker.

Boy afraid to sleep alone

DEAR DR. LEVINE: I'm a 14-year-old boy. My problem is I have a fear of sleeping alone. Some nights I go to sleep with my mother and sometimes I just wander back and forth through the halls between my parents' room and my own. My mother says it is okay but I know it's not. Can you please help me?

ANSWER: I hate to sound like a broken record, but again I don't have enough information about you to make any kind of firm recommendation. You don't tell us whether this is a recent fear, or if it is longstanding. We don't know whether it came on acutely, or was very gradual in its development. You haven't mentioned if you have any other fears, or how the rest of your life — school, friends, family — is doing. We'd also have to know more about this fear itself. Is there any reality to it at all? Did something happen recently that precipitated it? Do you get any sleep at all at night?

At your age, fears of this nature are unusual, and while not a cause for alarm, your parents should have sufficient concern to want to nip it in the bud. You seem more upset about it than your mother but she may just be trying to reassure you — and herself. I'd recommend that you go down to your family doctor or pediatrician and have a chat with him or her. It may be nothing, and easily handled. And even if it is somewhat more involved, early attention and management should have you sleeping again — alone and comfortably.

DEAR DR. POWELL: Every summer since I started having my period I've had a problem. I love swimming but I've been told you cannot swim when you have your period. So for two years I sat around the pool suffering and being nagged to go swimming by friends who didn't know my situation.

I heard that if you wear a tampon you can go swimming. If there is no other way, I'll be brave and use a tampon even though I'm terrified of the idea and my mother disapproves.

ANSWER: Many myths and "old wives' tales" have been passed from mother to daughter about the activities permissible during menstruation. Among these are taboos about bathing or washing your hair. These taboos are nonsense. Now it is recommended that a woman should carry on with regular activity when she is menstruating. The physical activity is good for her.

Personal hygiene is very important when a woman is menstruating and a daily shower or bath will make her feel better.

During the heavy flow a woman may still prefer to sun bathe or sit on the pool side rather than risk the embarrassment of staining her bathing suit.

Now when most women use tampons there is less risk of this happening.

The tampon is very small and can usually be used without difficulty by even young teenagers.

It is certainly the most satisfactory means of protection if you want to swim. Talk it over with your mother and try using tampons, beginning with the smallest or junior size. There is no reason why you cannot go swimming this summer.

DEAR MR. VICHERT: I am a 15-year-old girl and I never get to go out. My mom thinks that I should go out only once a week. Sometimes I don't even get to go that often. Even if something very important is going on she won't let me go. If I go out one Saturday my mom won't let me go the next Saturday.

I usually just ask to go to my best friend's house, which is only two blocks away. If I do go out it's only until 8 or 9 p.m.

I always go to the basketball and volleyball games and practices after school. I usually don't get home till 5 or 6 p.m. My mom always gets mad because I come home so late from school. She always compares me with my sisters.

ANSWER: I agree with you that it is unfair for your mother to compare you to your sisters. It is important for parents to realize that each of their children are unique, react to situations differently, and should be given individual consideration for their individual situations.

At 15 you should be able to go out at least once a week if you have shown to your mother that you are responsible enough to handle this privilege. I also feel that basketball and volleyball and other school activities are part of going to school and that you should be permitted to participate in them. Would it help if someone from the school talked with your mother and let her know that it was a school activity?

It sounds, from your letter, that you are trying to co-operate with your mother. Would it help if you let her know that and asked that the two of you work out some rules together so that you would both understand the expectations?

Send questions to Youth Clinic, The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, B.C., V8W 2N4. Readers may wish to talk about their problems. They can call NEED at 386-6323.

The manager of a business must make a wide range of decisions daily. Some of these decisions affect the day-to-day operations of his business, while other affect the long term.

How does a businessman arrive at a good decision? Well, individual processes notwithstanding, it would be accurate to say that the more factual information a decision maker has, the better his chances are of making a good decision. Statistics can assist the manager in evaluating the seasonal patterns, price changes, and market size associated with his particular product or business.

How a Manufacturer Can Profit from Facts is a 39-page book that is published by Statistics Canada. The book draws up four fictitious case studies of different businesses, showing how each of these businesses would be able to achieve greater success through the use of carefully tabulated statistics.

Suggestion box a popular idea

Elizabeth Forbes

A suggestion box that gives members an opportunity to express their ideas for projects and programs is proving a popular innovation with Victoria branch of the B.C. Historical Association.

Ruth Chambers, recently named branch president, says that already more than 20 per cent of the membership have placed suggestions in that box.

"These have all been carefully filed, not only for possible use but more or less as archival material reflecting the character of our membership in this spring and summer of 1979."

Already two of the suggestions have been accepted and are being implemented.

One is the idea of presenting, at each monthly meeting, a question about an historic site in the area, asking members to identify the site and then urging them to visit it and get to really know it.

The other is to honor, in some way, members of the branch who are descendents of families who settled in Victoria and vicinity in the 19th century.

"Preliminary plans have already been made for this event which we have set tentatively for early 1980," Mrs. Chambers says. "Details will be finalized in the fall."

So far those slips of paper deposited in the suggestion box have dealt mainly with program ideas.

Ruth Chambers discusses suggestion with Michael Halleran

However, she points out, the branch has several interesting projects lined up for the 1979-1980 year.

Well on the way are plans for a display in Hillside Mall Oct. 4 to 6.

"This is being arranged in two parts, one with books, pictures and artifacts and the other a fun thing . . . something striking and yet amusing to offset the stiff competition we might have from other displays."

A more ambitious, and ongoing, project is centred around a photographic record of letterings on memorial stones in Pioneer Square, adjacent to Christ Church Cathedral and opposite the YM-YWCA.

"Lettering on those stones is gradually being erased by time and weather," the branch president says.

"So we plan to take black and white photographs (best for archival purposes) before it is too late."

Immediate past branch president Michael Halleran is head of the active projects committee.

Its interesting to note that lettering on a stone in Pioneer Square, close to Quadra Street, gives a brief history of the site.

It tells how a cemetery was authorized there in 1858 after Victoria's first burial ground, near Douglas and Johnson Streets, was closed.

The land was set aside five years before that by James Douglas, chief factor of the Hudson's Bay Company, and again reserved by him in 1858, acting as governor of the Colony of Vancouver Island.

Then in 1873, when Ross Bay Cemetery was opened, burials ceased at the Quadra Street place.

In 1909 the site was converted into a public park and dedicated many years later when title was transferred from the province to the city.

Also of interest is the fact that the B.C. Historical Association and the Victoria branch were organized at a public meeting on Oct. 21, 1922, in the provincial archives department, then in the Legislative Buildings.

Aims were to encourage historical research and stimulate public interest in B.C. history, to promote the preservation and marking of historical sites, relics, natural features and other objects and places of historical interest and to publish historical sketches, studies and documents.

"Those aims and objectives are still followed," Ruth Chambers says.

Postscript: The new president of the B.C. Historical Association's Victoria section was born Ruth Enke on a pioneer Galiano Island farm, at a time when there was no resident doctor and no electricity there.

Before the First World War she came to Victoria with her family to live in a big black and white house with a tower, at the top of Island Road in Oak Bay, built by her father, Max Enke, and now owned by the Elkington family.

Early schooling was at St. Christopher's kindergarten and Norfolk House School; later education in England. In the 1920s she read English literature when she went up to Oxford.

It wasn't until she was in her 20s and had returned to Victoria that she realized Canada had a history.

"I strayed into the archives when it was under the big central dome of the Legislative Buildings, and I was overwhelmed by what I found."

Since then, Canadian history and more especially the history of this province has been one of her abiding interests.

In the late 1930s Ruth Enke married Lawrence Chambers. Twenty years later, using her maiden name as a by-line, she was writing a popular column for the Victoria Daily Times, a work eventually discontinued for health reasons.

Today the Chambers home is Madrona Farm, an extensive acreage off Blenkinsop Road in Saanich. They have three sons, all married, and a number of grandchildren.

Pool firms post splashy profits

TORONTO (CP) — The price of gasoline is keeping many people at home this summer where they are spending their money on backyard swimming pools, say two pool builders.

And spokesmen for installation companies in major Canadian cities said in telephone interviews that pool sales this year have increased 10 to 100 per cent over last year at this time.

"It's absolutely incredible," said Patrick King, president of Seaway Pools Ltd. of Toronto which produces and installs vinyl pools. "Sales to the end of May are up 43 per cent over the same period last year."

King said he suspects gasoline prices are responsible for the increased sales, an opinion shared by Orland Siciliano, president of Coles and Orland Pool Construction Ltd. of Toronto.

Time spent driving to the cottage used to be the reason people gave for buying a pool, but now they say it is the cost of gasoline, Siciliano said.

The cost of a pool complete with plumbing varies from $500 to $20,000 depending on the type of construction, size and the amount of landscaping involved, installers said.

An above-ground vinyl pool costs up to $1,500.

Two kinds of abuse

WINNIPEG (CP) — Psychological abuse can be as destructive to children as physical abuse, says Dr. Ken McRae, a psychologist at the child development clinic of the Winnipeg Health Sciences Centre.

"Physical abuse gets all the attention because a child's life is endangered. But psychological and emotional abuse is 10 times as prevalent," he says.

"For every child who comes to the clinic with signs of physical abuse, there are five or six others who are massively psychologically deprived."

Children whose need for affection isn't met are often aggressive. They push and shove and provoke their classmates. Some withdraw into a world of their own, but the most common reaction is rage.

"Children like this quickly come to our attention because they drive teachers crazy," says Jocelyn Goodine, a social worker for the St. James-Assiniboia school division in Winnipeg.

Many psychological studies have demonstrated that emotional deprivation can stunt a child's intellectual and creative ablilities.

Studies of children raised in orphanages and training schools confirm the lasting effects of emotional deprivation.

Institutionalized children, however, are by no means its only victims.

The worst problems in children, says Ms. Goodine, are a result of undemonstrative, perfectionist parents who may be able to give their child unlimited material goods but no love.

She says she has seen chronically depressed six-year-olds who have given up on life. A drop in mental ability as shown in I. Q. tests is common.

Left untreated, disturbed children can grow into delinquent adolescents, she says.

A classic dilemma

Dear Abby

by Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This problem concerns my son. Two years ago he was engaged to marry a girl he had been crazy about for years. They were both 21. Then she ran off and married an older man (30) she'd known only a few weeks.

My son was brokenhearted. He couldn't eat or sleep, lost 20 pounds and walked around in a daze for months.

Then he met a lovely girl who raised his spirits and made him feel that life was worth living again. They planned to announce their engagement this month and marry in September.

Out of the blue, his old girlfriend called to say she and her husband were separated. She said she made a terrible mistake, she still loves my son and wants to pick up where they left off.

My son saw her, and is now considering dropping the girl who brought him out of the dumps and going back with the girl who broke his heart.

HIS MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: He should do what he wants to do. and you should offer no advice unless he asks for it. And neither will I.

DEAR ABBY: A friend of mine being treated for a skin condition told me that her doctor gave her a "word association test" in which he used some very filthy words which made her most uncomfortable.

She is an elderly widow who has raised several children. She is not a prude, but she said she is not accustomed to hearing language like that. Another friend (also elderly) told me that she went to this same doctor for her nerves, and he used some very vulgar language with her, too. She said she was so disgusted she never went back.

Abby, is this something new in the practice of medicine? What can be done about it? A FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: This kind of "treatment" strikes me as most unconventional. If a patient feels that a doctor has behaved in an unprofessional or unethical manner, that doctor should be reported to the ethics committee of his county or state medical society.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "ARIES IN GARDEN CITY": The person who says he isn't interested in politics is like a drowning man who says he isn't interested in water.

Trust the doctor's judgment

YOUR HEALTH

by L. L. Coleman, MD

I've had anginal pain in the chest, over the heart. I'm 52, and I have a bad family history of this condition. I've been told by my doctor that surgery might be a possibility within the next few years. I've been reading everything that's available on the subject. I've even gone to the medical library. Some doctors write that the results of heart surgery are no better than the result achieved by the use of drugs. Do you have any definite information on this subject? — Mr. G.M.B.

DEAR MR. B.:

It's understandable that any intelligent person would want to thoroughly research a problem of such importance to him. Yet, within the framework of that research is the possibility of being confused by statistical material and differences of medical and surgical opinion.

The choice of the use of medicines as against the bypass operation is a highly technical one. There is no rule that can be applied to all patients with coronary artery disease of the heart. Some patients with this condition may not be incapacitated by the anginal pain over the heart. Others may be virtually crippled by their inability to function. This is only one of the determining factors in the decision.

Unfortunately, you alone cannot take on the responsibility of this decision. It can be made only by the doctors, heart specialists and surgeons who are observing the activities of a patient while at rest and while at work.

Special X-ray tests, known as "angiograms," are made to determine the extent of the coronary artery disease. This becomes vital in the choice of treatment.

Since you cannot properly evaluate statistics, you cannot predicate your life and your longevity based on your own interpretation of the material you have read. Open and frank discussion with your doctors will give you a far better insight into every aspect of your problem. Only after thorough evaluation of each individual patient's problems can doctors arrive at such an important decision. You must place your trust in their judgment.

WIN! GRAND PRIZE TRIP FOR TWO TO HAWAII, By Wardair

The object is to match the official letters published every day with the letters in the grid which you have filled in with your name (see samples 1 and 2). When you have circled a row of letters across, vertically, or diagonally either way, send your entry in for the bi-weekly draw for cash prizes. You may submit as many entries as you wish per game, but each must be in a separate envelope.

LETTERS FOR TODAY, GAME NO. 2 ONLY

IMPORTANT!
IN ORDER TO BE ELIGIBLE, YOUR ENTRY MUST COMPLY WITH RULE NO. 2

THE NAME GAME

Rules and Procedures

Object of "The Name Game": To become eligible for prize drawings by matching letters of the alphabet, published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist, with the letters in your name. Each game starts with a Saturday Times and ends in the Sunday Colonist two weeks later. The official entry form will be published every day. All members of a family may play. There is no age limit. You may enter more than once but only one entry per envelope may be submitted. As each game ends, you are invited to play the next game.

1. Using the official entry form or a reasonably hand-drawn facsimile (no mechanically reproduced forms accepted), start at the upper left hand corner and print your name continuously, one letter in each square, until all the squares are filled in. (For example, if your name is John Anderson, Sample 1 shows how to fill out your entry form.) Do not include punctuation.
Use your legal name, in a form which can be verified on your driver's licence, social security card or other official identification. You may use various forms of your first name (e.g. John, Jonathan or John S.), as long as your identity can be verified. No nicknames, please.
2. Letters for the Name Game will be published as follows: 4 letters Saturday and Sunday and 3 letters daily. When an official letter matches one in your diagram, circle it on your entry. That letter may appear in more than one square on your diagram, but you may circle only one such letter (of your choice) each time. Since individual letters are selected at random, they may appear more than once — even on the same day. You may circle one such letter as many times as that letter is published. The same letters will be published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist but may only be used once in any one entry.
3. When you match enough letters to complete one row on your diagram — horizontal, vertical or diagonal (corner to corner), as in Sample 2, you are eligible for the prize drawings for that game. Drawings for 15 prizes will be held every other week for 10 weeks. At each drawing $500 goes to the first name drawn, $100 to the next —, $50 each to the next 3, and $25 for the last 10 — (Winners must answer a time-limited skill-testing question before collecting prizes.) All names drawn will be returned to the drum for the grand prize drawing.
4. Mail your completed entry form to: The Name Game, Victoria Press, P.O. Box 1390, Victoria, B.C. V8W 3C4; postmarked no later than the Monday following the end of that game. Completed entries may also be delivered, in a sealed envelope, to Victoria Press, no later than Tuesday, the following day. The game number (such as 'Game 1', 'Game 2', etc.) must appear at the lower left-hand corner of the envelope.
5. All entries will be placed in a container and the winning entries will be drawn at random. Winners will be announced in the Colonist and Times on the Friday following the close of each game. The odds of winning will depend on the number of eligible entries received.
6. It is not necessary to buy the Times or Colonist to participate. Copies of the newspaper may be inspected free of charge at the newspaper's offices during regular business hours. Sorry, official letters will not be given over the phone.
7. Employees of the newspapers and members of their immediate families are not eligible to participate. Unclaimed or invalidly claimed prizes will be donated to a recognized charity at the close of the contest.
8. Winners agree to allow publication of their names, pictures and publicity in the Times and Colonist without additional consideration. Submission of an entry indicates acceptance of all game rules.
9. Decisions of Victoria Press judges in all matters relating to the The Name Game will be final.

Student race riot in China worst in 30 years

By JOHN FRASER
Globe and Mail

PEKING — The worst incident between Chinese and foreign students in 30 years of Communist rule in China has once again focused on a problem many people, Chinese and foreigners alike, would prefer to ignore or at the very least keep quiet about — racism.

The sequence of events and various details are still sketchy, but after piecing together stories from foreign students and some diplomatic sources prepared to talk, it appears clear that a three-day melee at the Shanghai Textile Institute last week resulted in 16 foreign students being hospitalized and an undetermined number of Chinese seriously wounded.

The students — mostly Africans — were all from Third World countries such as the Congo, Zaire, Mali, Senegal, Mauritanea, Nepal, Pakistan, Sudan and South Yemen.

Although the cause of the incident has not fully been determined, it may have had something to do with the arrest June 30 of a Mauritanian student on charges of raping Chinese girls. The student was kept in jail for a week and was only released into the custody of a Mauritanian diplomat last Saturday on the understanding that the student was persona non grata inside China. He has now left the country.

Before his release, however, another incident occurred was which sparked the three days of fighting at the institute. According to foreign students' accounts — the Chinese version of the events has not appeared and is unlikely to — a black student was asked to turn off his radio by a group of Chinese students trying to study for crucial final examinations that are now upon them. The black refused and when he later left his residence he was set upon by Chinese and severely beaten with sticks and clubs.

The next day a big character poster went up on the institute's grounds denouncing black students in general — a poster reminiscent of an earlier attack this year at a Nanking institute which resulted in a smaller, although equally worrying, incident.

When African students tried to tear down the poster in Shanghai, a general fight broke out that continued sporadically for 36 hours when all foreign students were removed from the Textile Institute's grounds and taken to a hotel 45 kilometres outside Shanghai.

The foreign students claim the Chinese students, as well as the general population of Shanghai, have been increasingly hostile to their presence since the new year.

Last spring, said one student, a delegation voiced concern over the problem to officials but were told that "racism doesn't exist in China," so their concern was "unwarranted."

The students further claim that during the three-day fracas, members of Shanghai's public security bureau were present on the institute's campus but took the side of the Chinese student.

The only identified Chinese asualty was the institute's director of foreign students who had his face smashed with some sort of blunt implement.

Although these sketchy details are unsatisfactory, the incident certainly took place and the seriousness of it can be gauged by the fact that the local authorities managed to get Vice-Premier Fang Yi to make an appeal for all studens to return to their rooms. This appeal was apparently successful and the students were then removed to a distant hotel.

Anyone who has lived in China for a period can testify that it is surprising there have not been more incidents. Most Chinese people have a very limited experience with other races and a great deal of ignorance abounds despite official propaganda about solidarity with the Third World.

Mysterious Europa reveals icy 'canals'

By THOMAS O'TOOLE
Washington Post

PASADENA — A silver-and-black spacecraft named Voyager II Monday flew by Jupiter and its four large and richly-colored moons that scientists find more fascinating than most planets in the solar system.

Moving at more than 72,000 kilometres per hour, the 1,800-pound Voyager II passed by Jupiter at 11:21 p.m. PDT from a distance of 650,400 kilometres. Before that, it flew by the dark brown, ice-covered moons Callisto and Gannymede and then passed the yellow moon Europa that was found to be criss-crossed with hundreds of ice-filled crevices.

Just beyond Jupiter, the spacecraft began a 10-hour watch of the red moon Io where at least six volcanoes were erupting as Voyager II began to photograph them.

"We've seen the youngest, the oldest, the brightest, the darkest, the reddest and the most active bodies in the solar system," Dr. Laurance Soderblom of the U.S. Geological Survey said at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory where Voyager is directed. "We thought we had some idea of what planets were like but now we've discovered how wrong we were."

The surprise of the day was a close-up picture of the moon Europa, which looked for all the world like the 19th century telescope views of the planet Mars, features of which some astronomers thought were canals.

Threaded and laced by hundreds of dark cracks in its icy yellow surface, Europa had the appearance of a giant eggshell that had been squeezed and cracked by an invisible hand. The cracks were as wide as 50 kilometres and as long as 3,500 kilometres. None of the cracks were deeper than a few hundred metres and some appeared to have a raised look, as if they were bulging from the surface.

"You certainly couldn't call them canyons," Soderblom said. "They have the appearance of gullies of the fracture patterns you get in pack ice in the polar regions of earth."

Soderblom speculated that the giant fractures were the result of the terrific strains ice flows put on each other as they rose from the crust of Europa. Soderblom said that the ice may be forcing its way through a tin crust in the moon from a mantle of ice and slush as deep as 95 kilometres.

Though Voyager II flew by Jupiter without any apparent mishap, the spacecraft encountered radiation that was three times as intense as scientists had forecast. Even at a distance of 644,000 kilometres, the spacecraft was bombarded with electrons and protrons that penetrated the shielding built into the spacecraft to protect its 11 instruments from radiation damage.

At 11:30 a.m. EDT, the radiation was so intense that scientists turned off a sensitive ultraviolet instrument six hours earlier than they had planned to do so. Had they waited any longer, the instrument may have been damaged and the experiment lost.

Alberta hard hit as fires rage across Canada

Times News Services

With a combination of tinder dry conditions and lightning storms, forest fires are raging in several parts of the country today.

At Erda airstrip, northwest of Fort McMurray, the men collapse at the bush camp, famished, exhausted and reeking of smoke.

They have been fighting the biggest forest fires to hit Alberta in 10 years where electrical storms have touched off blazes covering almost 500,000 acres.

A 15,000-acre blaze 24 kilometres east of the airstrip has consumed black spruce and scrub pine in a wall of flame. It sent a pillar of smoke into the sky, flattening on top like the mushroom cloud of an atomic bomb blast.

To the southwest, about half way between Fort McMurray and Edmonton, an even larger fire covering 21,000 acres is being brought under control.

Further north, Northwest Territories firefighters were battling 14 forest fires Monday around Great Slave Lake while another 65 fires raged at will across the Western Arctic region.

About 150 firefighters were trying to control three fires burning outside Fort Smith, three outside Hay River, six outside Yellowknife, one outside Fort Simpson and one near Great Bear Lake.

Ralph Checkley, head of the territories' fire control service, said the men were being helped by two water bombers, one chemical bomber and 12 helicopters.

He said none of the communities were in danger.

The fires ranged from one acre to 36,000 acres.

Checkley said about 500,000 acres of timber have been burned in the territories this year. The season average is 1½ million acres.

Meanwhile, in Gambo, Newfoundland, fire officials said late Monday that a raging forest fire which had destroyed almost 39,000 acres of prime woodland is still burning out of control across a wide front.

The fire, which broke out last Wednesday, has been officially described as out of control since Friday and so far has destroyed some summer cottages and at least one sawmill. There were no reports of any injuries among about 100 men fighting the blaze.

Late in the day, fire officials here said a gas tank farm outside nearby Glovertown where about 50,000 gallons of gasoline were thought to be stored was in the path of the fire and was in some danger of being engulfed. Gambo is about 170 kilometres north of St. John's.

Winds over much of the district Monday evening were moderate and there was no rain forecast to aid weary firefighters.

Earlier in the day, four waterbombers and three helicopters being used to dump water on the flames were grounded because of dense smoke that drifted as high as 1,200 metres.

At several times during the day, the fire jumped the Trans-Canada Highway along a 10-kilometre front and forced RCMP highway patrol officers to close the road.

Rhinos top communists in May vote

OTTAWA (CP) — The Rhinoceros party, whose members said if elected they would resign, was the fifth most popular party in the May 22 federal election, outdrawing even the combined total votes of two versions of communism.

Final figures released by Chief Electoral Officer Jean-Marc Hamel Monday show the Rhinos — who also pledged to repeal the law of gravity — collected 62,623 votes in the three provinces in which they had candidates. They were far behind the three major parties and Social Credit.

The figures, compiled after official counts many days after the election in the 282 constituencies, show that 11,538,510 persons — 76.18 per cent of 15,146,091 eligible voters — cast ballots in the election. Less than one per cent of the total vote — 84,249 ballots — were rejected.

Of the votes cast 4,110,453, or 35.62 per cent of the total vote, supported the victorious Progressive Conservatives.

When the 282-seat Commons meets in the fall it will have 136 Conservative members, 114 Liberals, 26 New Democrats and six Social Credit MPs.

The Libertarian party drew 15,847 votes and the Union Populaire 19,564 while independents and those without affiliation got 52,327.

The Rhino vote was greater than the combined total of the Marxist Leninists — 14,386 in seven provinces — and Communists — 9,134 in seven. Most Rhinos ran in Quebec but they also were represented in Ontario and British Columbia.

The figures show these provincial vote totals, which include rejected ballots:

Ontario 4,163,871 (including 1,012,066 in Toronto); Quebec 3,252,127 (including 1,087,728 in Montreal); Nova Scotia 427,855; New Brunswick 338,990; Manitoba 515,465; British Columbia 1,198,793; Prince Edward Island 65,109; Saskatchewan 490,703; Alberta 855,448; Newfoundland 203,264; Yukon 10,240; Northwest Territories 16,894.

Here is the provincial picture of the three main parties and Social Credit: (seats in brackets)

Ontario: Ontario: Conservative (57) 1,732,663; Liberal (32) 1,509,848; New Democrat (6) 872,967; Social Credit (0) 1,002. The figures include Toronto: Conservative (12) 394,569; Liberal (10) 390,136; NDP (1) 208,187; Social Credit (0) 125.

Metric ticket tackled

RED DEER (CP) — Jim Goodwin, 59, of Delburn, Alta., has turned his defence of a $30 speeding ticket into an assault on the metric system.

Goodwin has refused to pay a speeding ticket he received in Calgary because it lists his car's speed in kilometres. A provincial court judge gave him the option of paying the fine or spending 15 days in jail.

Goodwin told the unsympathetic court that the metric system has been imposed illegally in Alberta by "Ayatollah" Lougheed and claims his Calgary lawyers may have found a way to stop it.

CP freight strike ties up deliveries

Canadian Press

Freight handlers for Canadian Pacific Express, without a contract since last Dec. 31, remained on strike across the country today.

A company spokesman said customers are welcome to pick up their orders because the strike is stopping all door-to-door deliveries, but a union spokesman said the public was not crossing picket lines.

All 2,700 workers in 60 terminals walked off the job Monday after a breakdown in negotiations Sunday in Toronto. No further talks are planned.

Collin Gribbons, director of information for the Brotherhood of Railway, Airline and Steamship Clerks, said today some minor problems developed on picket lines Monday but all difficulties were ironed out.

The union, which wants wage parity with Canadian National Express employees, has proposed a new two-year contract which would give its members an hourly increase of 66 cents in the first year and 58 cents in the second.

Board ruling opens Calgary beer taps

EDMONTON (CP) — Some Albertans will be able to quench their thirst on domestically-produced beer again following a precedent-setting decision Monday by the Alberta Board of Industrial Relations.

The board ruled that a company layoff of employees at the Carling O'Keefe brewery in Calgary was an illegal lockout because a valid contract was in force.

The board ordered the brewery to rescind its layoff notice and to have its 137 workers back on the job by 7 a.m. Wednesday.

The order came after the Canadian Union of United Brewery, Flour, Cereal, Softdrink and Distillery Workers at Carling O'Keefe complained that the company along with Labatt's had laid off workers to put pressure on the union at Molson's where 91 workers have been on strike for almost two weeks.

The Carling O'Keefe workers claimed there was an agreement by the companies to create a beer drought because layoff notices were issued at the same time and effective on the same date at both plants.

The decision marks the first time in Alberta history that a company's action during a labor dispute has been ruled illegal. Union spokesmen throughout the province said they were happy with the ruling.

Gerry Lucas, a lawyer representing Alberta breweries, said Carling O'Keefe will abide by the decision although the company had expected the board to rule in its favor.

The decision may mean little to Edmonton beer drinkers.

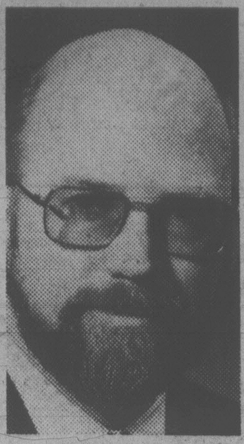
Excess energy sales eased



HEWITT

The government introduced legislation Monday that will allow industry to produce and sell excess energy while remaining free of the restrictive regulations of the Energy Act.

Energy Minister Jim Hewitt said the bill is part of the province's new energy policy and will help alleviate pending power shortages.

The new bill amends the current Energy Act so that any industry that produces surplus energy and then sells it is exempt from the provisions of the Energy Act.

Under existing regulations any industry that produces more than 15 per cent over and above its own energy needs has to either let it go to waste, or if it wants to sell it, be governed by the Energy Act — the bill designed to regulate energy utilities.

Some industries are using wood waste (hog fuel) as land fill, or allowing steam to escape when they produce more than they need, Hewitt said.

All such surplus energy sales still have to be approved by the provincial cabinet.

Bus switch from Hydro underway

A bill which removes transit operations from B.C. Hydro was introduced in the legislature Monday.

Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm said the Metro Transit Operating Company Act would bring about the transfer of all assets and personnel of the transit wing of Hydro to the new company.

The new corporation will work in tandem with the Urban Transit Authority, set up last year as the planning and management organ of transit operations once they are removed from B.C. Hydro.

The Metro Transit Operating Co. (MTO) will take under its wing some 3,000 Hydro employees.

Actual ownership of the more than 1,000 buses and trollies, the two Vancouver SeaBuses and various buildings and land holdings will actually reside with the Urban Transit Authority.

The MTO will only take over the service vehicles and spare parts from Hydro. The bill does not make clear why the equipment is being split between the two bodies.

Vander Zalm said he couldn't estimate the value of the assets, but he said it's possible the MTO will have to pay only $1 to Hydro.

He said Hydro should be anxious to give up the transit system which will lose an estimated $67 million this year.

All of the transferred employees will retain the salary levels, seniority and full pension benefits they receive at Hydro.

The full transfer of transit from Hydro to the UTA and MTO is still some time off, however, Vander Zalm cautioned.

Negotiations for the transfer of equipment from B.C. Hyrdo are still going on, and the Greater Vancouver Regional District is balking at participating in the UTA.

The Capital Region has already agreed to take over transit management although it is not happy with the final cost-sharing arrangements.

But the GVRD has so far refused to sign a takeover agreement.

Vander Zalm said Monday it is unlikely the CRD would be allowed to participate without the GVRD, so he may be forced to set up an entirely separate commission to run the management and planning end of transit.

But that is a last recourse and he says he is still hoping an agreement can be reached with the GVRD.

Children's rights probe rejected

Education Minister Pat McGeer rejected a call Monday for a public inquiry into childrens' rights in public schools.

Alberni NDP MLA Bob Skelly called for the inquiry after an incident in the Alberni school district.

Skelly said several students were interrogated against their will by a school principal, denied access to their parents and legal counsel and were confined for two hours which would be illegal under the justice system in the community at large.

McGeer said the case in question involves drugs and will be investigated but added there will be no public inquiry into childrens' rights in public schools.

Lawyer named to head Vogel investigation

VANCOUVER (CP) — Lawyer L. S. G. Finch, of Vancouver, has been named as legal counsel to the inquiry commission investigating allegations of court interference by deputy attorney-general Richard Vogel.

The investigation was announced after Vogel called Richmond provincial court judge Philip Govan in connection with a family court case.

Barber pedals after commuter bike routes

Victoria NDP MLA Charles Barber has again cranked up his one-man campaign for more bike paths throughout the province.

Monday he introduced a private member's bill — the Bikeways Development Act — that would create a bicycle transportation network in B.C.

Each session for the past four years Barber has introduced the bill but like most private bills, it has died on the order paper.

Barber said he would like to see both recreational and commuter bike paths.

"It's a step into the future with a cheap, efficient and healthy means of moving people," he said.

Barber lauded the work done by Victoria's regional bike committee in proposing routes, including the completed path from the University of Victoria to downtown.

Many other provincial communities are planning bike routes and they need provincial government support, he said.

Opening lead — seven of spades.

A declarer is sometimes in serious trouble if he lacks adequate communication between his own hand and dummy. The ability to enter either hand at will, for whatever reason, is an important factor in the play.

The defenders frequently have a similar problem. They may also require adequate communication from one hand to the other. Moreover, because the defenders usually have fewer high cards than the declarer, they often must husband their resources even more carefully to stay in touch with one another.

Consider this deal where East had to make an unusual play to defeat the contract. West led a spade in response to East's overcall and declarer played the ten from dummy.

Had East taken the ten with the king, South would have made the contract easily. Whatever was returned, declarer would have established his diamonds and scored at least nine tricks. East's spades would no longer have been a threat because he could not both establish and cash them.

Thoroughly aware of this difficulty, East signaled with the nine of spades at trick one instead of winning the ten with the king. The high spade play directed West to lead another spade if and when he gained the lead. East had to hope that West had a diamond entry as well as another spade to lead.

East's signal at trick one proved to be highly successful. South took the spade lead with the jack and led the nine of diamonds, but he was fighting a losing cause. West went up with the king of diamonds and led another spade, removing dummy's ace at the same time as he established his partner's suit.

South could then do no better than cash his eight high-card tricks, and the contract eventually went down one as a result of East's farsighted play.

Sleep on dear good mother,
long years

Since you left
filled with sadness and tears

Yours was a heart
and gay

Scattering sunshine
the way

You know how we love you
love you yet

Though God took you from us,
we cannot forget.

Refugee families heading for city

Victoria will be the new home of six or more refugee families from southeast Asia, an immigration department spokesman said Monday.

The moves will take place during the next few months, according to the spokesman.

He said the applications have been processed and the sponsors, mainly Greater Victoria churches, are waiting to hear from Ottawa.

About six applications have been received and there is a possibility many more will be coming through.

To prevent exploitation, no individuals are allowed to sponsor the families.

Sponsoring groups usually consist of about five people who must prove they have enough funds to support the families during their first year here.

Several professional people, such as teachers, doctors and social workers, are usually included in a sponsoring group to offer asistance.

Time period from the application stage to arrival of the refugee family is usually about six months.

Canadian selection teams are located in Hong Kong, Singapore, and Kuala Lumpur, the capital of Malaysia.

Blaze rips Everett pier

EVERETT, Wash. (AP) — Fire engulfed a pier on the Everett waterfront today, destroying a Scott Paper Co. warehouse and five railroad cars, police said.

A Port of Everett spokesman said fireboats and all available fire reserves were at the scene. He said the wooden pier was about 90 years old.

One ship that had been docked at the pier had to be pushed away, but a ship on the other side was still there, he said.

A spokesman at the Scott plant next to the pier said the warehouse was full of paper products. There was no immediate estimate of damage.

GARDENING

Jack Beastall

Strawberries pleasant but a luxury

The growing of strawberries is more or less a tradition with home gardeners. Many methods of culture are used, but those recommended in British Columbia are mostly based on commercial field crops which may or may not be successful in the home garden.

This information has lead to the common belief strawberry plants should not be kept for more than three years, after that length of time the crop dwindles to nothing.

The plants may not give profitable crops under commercial culture, but the idea that the plants are worn out in three years is refuted by a report of an English gardener who has cropped the same plants for 20 years.

The strawberry bed was originally prepared with compost and well rotted manure. It is heavily dressed with compost each spring, and the only fertilizer used is sulphate of potash at the rate of two ounces to the square yard.

The plants are set two feet apart, and the accompanying photographs show them nearly touching and about 14 to 18 inches in height.

The variety is the old "Royal Sovereign", not to be confused with the "British Sovereign" which is a selection found on a strawberry farm in the Fraser Valley with the original name of "British Columbia Sovereign".

It is well known that anystrawberry variety must be suited to the soil, and definite soils are recommended for strawberry farms, but for the few plants grown in the home garden a suitable soil can be prepared.

One thing to be avoided is fresh manure. It contains too much free nitrogen which results in rank growth and soft berries of poor quality. Seven-year fertilizer tests have shown the plants respond only to sulphate of potash, which produces firm fruits of high flavor.

Gardeners who replace their strawberry plants frequently depend on runner plants from their own stock. Unless these runners are properly selected, the berry crop decreases over the years and the bed finally becomes barren.

There is a reason for this condition. Strawberries can be propagated from seed or runners, seed being used mainly in the search for new varieties.

Runners are used because the plants produced in this way are almost identical with the parent plant that produced the runner. But there is a catch to this production of runners.

Plants which produce the most berries rarely produce a runner until the soil at the roots becomes short of nutrients and humus. The runners are made so that new plants can root in a richer soil.

Any plant which produces very few berries will make quantities of runners, and the runner plants like the parent plant, never produce many berries. When the home gardener uses these runners for propagation, fruit production diminishes and the bed is soon useless.

The report mentioned above proves that it is unnecessary to make frequent stock replacements if the soil is kept fertile and fresh manure and mixed fertilizers avoided.

The home gardener tolerating poor crops may either make a new start with purchased plants of a variety suited to the soil, or select the best fruiting of the present plants and build up a new stock by using runner plants.

As the present plants produce runners destroy all that make more than three runners. Make up a new bed now with plenty of compost and very old manure; water, and destroy all weeds. Move the runner plants to the new bed in late August or early September, to make new roots before the growing season ends.

By selecting runners from the best of these plants each year, if and when produced, a stock of good fruiting plants will result which can be cropped for years if the humus is constantly replenished.

Fifty strawberry plants take considerable room in a small garden. Unless they supply sufficient fruit for eating fresh and for processing, it would be better to purchase a few berries and use the space for nutritious winter vegetables.

City Hall interference with fire safety raked

City hall politicians should stop interfering with fire chief Eric Simmons' efforts to crack down on unsafe buildings, alderman Robin Blencoe said today.

Blencoe said that "Our fire chief knows and understands the technical aspects of fire safety. We should let him get on with the job without having aldermen, who know nothing about fire safety, interfering every step of the way."

He said council should re-examine the whole system of enforcement of fire safety standards because the existing procedures are subject to political abuse.

Blencoe is angered at a recent fire prevention committee decision to inspect the Union Club, rather than allowing the fire department to post the building as having fire safety deficiencies.

Blencoe says that by touring the building, city council's fire committee is showing preferential treatment for the prestigous Union Club.

The Club, at 805 Gordon St., was warned of its safety shortcomings in a notice from chief Simmons on June 22, 1978. Having failed to take any action to remedy the situation the Club is now in line to receive a placard, posted in an public place, warning users of the building's dangers.

In opting to tour the building before deciding on the proposed posting, said Blencoe, the committee "is leading Victoria residents to wonder if perhaps there is truth in the old adage of one law for the rich, and another one for the poor."

The fire prevention committee was to conduct its tour of the club today.

The fire department has refused to disclose a list of the Union Club's safety deficiencies.

Lambrick overhaul

After three years of overcrowding, inadequate facilities and vandalism, there was finally some good news for Lambrick Park secondary school Monday night — the ministry of education has agreed to add five classrooms to the troubled Gordon Head school.

School board trustees learned in an administration report Monday night that the ministry had given the go-ahead for a science lab, art room and new library. The existing library will be transformed into two new classrooms.

Central Saanich architect Peter H. Neijmeijer was recommended for design duties, and the board approved his hiring.

Emergency line kept break-in man holding phone

WINNIPEG (CP) — A Winnipeg restaurant owner says he was kept on hold by an emergency operator while would-be thieves were breaking into his place of business.

Despite his pleading that it was an emergency, Arnold Petrauskas said he was also told to spell his name for the operator.

"I couldn't believe it. I could have been shot and they're asking me how to spell my name. It was like they were checking on a pizza order."

Finally, the restaurant owner was forced to scare off the thieves himself when one climbed through a window.

Petrauskas said when police officers arrived they told him the message took seven minutes to reach them, twice the time it takes to drive from the police station to the restaurant.

"They told me it would have been faster to call the station direct," he added.

Winnipeg Police Chief Norm Stewart has said he will look into the incident.

Similarities in killings detailed for Ross jury

Similar facts in the April slaying last year of a Port Angeles woman and the credibility of witnesses are the focal points of the Crown's case against Tommy Ross Jr., a B.C. Supreme Court jury was told Monday.

Counsel Richard Law, summing up the Crown's case during the 12th day of the trial, listed what he said were about 16 points of similarity between the Port Angeles murder and that of Janice Forbes, 26, whose strangled body was found on Mother's Day, May 14, 1978, in her Queen's Avenue apartment.

Ross, 20, of Los Angeles, is on trial for first-degree murder in the death of Forbes.

Defence counsel Douglas Christie is to sum up his case for the accused today and then, after they receive direction from Mr. Justice Alan Macfarlane, the members of the jury will retire to decide the verdict.

The Crown's last witness, Sgt. Pat Braiden of the Victoria police department was cross-examined by Christie Monday morning and then Christie said he would not be bringing in any witnesses for the defence.

"Our position is that the accused is not required to prove his innocence . . ." Christie said.

In presenting his case, Law told the jury members "if you are persuaded by that (Port Angeles) evidence, it indicates a unique method of operation, a hallmark if you want, a hallmark of identity, showing a system, plan, design and deliberation."

A witness testified during the trial that he saw Ross in the hallway of the Port Angeles apartment where Janet Bowcott lived on the night before her body was found strangled on April 24, 1978.

The jury was told earlier in the trial that Bowcott, 20, was found face-down with her hands tied behind her back, her feet bound together and a long woollen scarf wrapped tightly around her neck and taken down the back of the body, looped through the ligature tying the ankles and then tied back at the buttocks area.

The jury was also told that Forbes was found face-down with her hands tied behind her back, a piece of material knotted around her right ankle and the other end wrapped around her neck.

Police witnesses testified that Ross' thumb print was found in the Forbes apartment and a print of his left, middle finger in the Bowcott apartment.

Law's list of similar facts in the two cases included:

— That a black man identified by witnesses as Ross was seen in both apartment blocks.

— The victims were both young women with children. (Forbes had two children and the jury was told Bowcott had a baby, eight months to a year old).

— Both were strangled and "tied in a most unusual and aberrant manner."

- Both women lived alone with no indication of a male lodger.

- Both women were found clothed but braless. Forbes' blouse was partially open and there was a bra with the back hooks broken found beside Bowcott's body. Her blouse was torn.

— Both appeared to be day-time attacks and in each case the woman's body was found in the bedroom.

— There was no sign of a struggle in either case nor was there any evidence of sexual attack.

— Neither victim knew the accused.

Law said he would leave it up to the jury to decide whether to put any stock in defence counsel's inferences that the fingerprints were planted and that the case against Ross was a police conspiracy.

He said if the jury finds beyond a reasonable doubt that Ross killed Bowcott, then evidence in that murder can be applied in the Forbes' slaying to show similarity of design and proof of identity.

But, he added, it is not necessary to find Ross guilty of the Port Angeles murder if the jury members feel there is enough evidence in the Victoria case alone to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that he killed Forbes.

Law reviewed some of the testimony given in the Victoria case and said there is a thread of corroborative evidence running through the testimony of most of the witnesses.

"There are bits of evidence . . . which fit and assist you in judging credibility," he told the jury.

Even when there are some discrepancies in some of the testimony it adds to the credibility, Law said, because witnesses would not be expected to remember each and every detail.

Law told the jury if they have any reasonable doubt that Ross killed Forbes they should acquit him. If they don't he should be found guilty.

Before the judge

A 48-year-old William Head inmate was given four more months in jail after pleading guilty Monday in provincial court to being unlawfully at large.

Roy Wilson was serving a two-year term for possession of an instrument for making counterfeit money, possession of counterfeit money, possession of stolen property and possession of a restricted weapon, a .22-calibre pistol, imposed Oct. 5 in Nanaimo when he was issued a day pass from the medium-security; federal pennitentiary at noon June 27 to attend an Alcoholics Anonymous meeting and to visit his common-law wife in Victoria.

Crown counsel Don Laughton said Wilson failed to return at 11:59 p.m. and was at large until he was picked up Friday in Campbell River.

Judge Fred Green fined a 21-year-old man $400 for what he described as an "arrogant act" of shoplifting a jean jacket and jeans from Eaton's

Jean-Claude Joseph Jomphe of HMCS Kootenay pleaded guilty to the June 22 incident.

Laughton said a "sensormatic" device activated when Jomphe left the store and he was apprehended wearing the clothing for which he had not paid.

A 37-year-old man was given a 26-day intermittent sentence, to be served on 13 successive weekends, after pleading guilty to having care and control of a vehicle while having a breath alcohol reading over .08.

Laughton said that Garnet Samuel White, 902 Caledonia, was taken to the city police station for the test after his car was reported on fire Dec. 23 at Shakespeare and Denman. After firemen and police arrived and the fire was extinguished, officers noted that White appeared to be impaired. A breathalyser test produced readings of .35 and .34, Laughton said.

White was convicted of the same offence Aug. 30, 1976, and fined $600. He was convicted of impaired driving March 16, 1978, and fined $1,200.

A 21-year-old man made a left turn at the wrong time and place was fined $350 for driving while under suspension.

Laughton said Robert Dale McMillan, 1381 Pandora, turned left from Douglas on to Fisgard against a red light; bringing him to the attention of a city police officer.

When asked for his driver's licence, McMillan told the officer "the sheriff took it away." He had been suspended March 7 for accumulating too many penalty points, Laughton told the judge.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: Daljit Singh Nijjer, 42, of 1778 Seawood Place, $1,000; and Gerald Lloyd Danyluck, 40, of 1110 Catherine, $350.

Hot-rod riots rock Bathurst

BATHURST, N.B. (CP) — A three-ring circus of drag racing, stunt driving and drinking has turned this city into a shambles of broken glass and smoldering debris as a strike by the city's 26 policemen entered its sixth day today.

After a hot, muggy night of vandalism and mischief in downtown streets, city and union spokesmen today warned the rowdiness will get worse unless contracts are signed by the policemen and 87 blue-collar employees of the city also on strike.

Several hundred people in this community of 15,000 cheered and tossed beer bottles Monday night as daredevil drivers raced down main streets and rowdies set fires, destroyed phone booths, started fights and urinated in the streets.

Police held fast to their vow not to break their picket lines Monday night to keep the peace, as they had done twice since the strike began.

However, early today a patrol car carrying four striking policemen escorted an ambulance downtown to help a young woman who apparently passed out.

The cheering crowd of about 2,000, most of them young, pelted the police car and ambulance with bottles when they pulled up to help the woman.

"There is no way the people of Bathurst will let vandals ruin their city," Mayor John Duffy said today. "The people are hostile and fed up.

"I don't think these people will take the law into their own hands, I know they will."

Many of the people who watched the fray Monday night said that what started out as fun on the weekend has turned ugly and dangerous.

One woman, who refused to give her name for fear of reprisals, said she was ashamed to admit Bathurst was her home.

The outside workers and the police, represented by CUPE Local 1497, have said they will support each other and remain off the job until both contracts are signed with the city.

One of the cars in the street racing early today caught fire, the flames spreading to spilled oil and gas and threatening a service station for a time. There were no injuries.

The service station had been closed earlier because people were gassing up and not paying.

Windows at the Sears Ltd. store were broken Monday night and several persons were bitten by guard dogs posted to keep vandals away from the establishment.

At one point Monday night, a naked man jumped on top of a car and rode past a wildly appreciative crowd lining the street. Firecrackers were set off. There has been some looting, mainly of appliances.

Mayor Duffy has said the RCMP cannot be called in to break a legal strike unless an emergency, life-and-death situation develops. So far, city and provincial authorities have held back from declaring such a state of affairs.

Jobless lowest in 2½ years

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Canada's jobless rate in June dropped to its lowest level since December, 1976, but New Democratic Party MP Bob Rae warned today the Conservative government should not be "complacent" about the figures.

The government agency said the number of jobless last month registered 798,000, a decrease of 0.2 per cent to 7.5 per cent (seasonally adjusted) and a full percentage point below figures of June, 1978, when the unemployment rate stood at 8.5 per cent.

Despite the fact that the unemployment rate was at its lowest level in 2½ years, Canada still has the worst jobless rate in the industrialized world.

Unemployment in the United States for June was reported at 5.6 per cent, that country's best showing since 1974. Most recent avaiable rates for other major industrial democracies were 4.9 per cent in France, 3.7 per cent in West Germany, 2.1 per cent in Japan and 5.4 per cent in Britain.

In Victoria the actual unemployment rate fell to seven per cent in June from 7.4 in May and 9.2 in April.

There are no seasonally adjusted figures for the Victoria area.

In June, 1978, the rate was 6.4 per cent.

Wally Pickering, manager of the local Canada Employment Centre, said the slightly higher unemployment this June, compared with last year, was due almost entirely to an increase in the number of outsiders applying for work here.

In June, he said, there were 114 people from Ontario, 95 from Alberta and 265 from other parts of British Columbia who registered for work in Victoria.

The surprising figure, he said, was the 114 from Ontario. Normally only a small number from that province seek work in Victoria.

The local economy continues to be strong, although unemployment hits high and low levels in reaction to the changing tourist seasons.

Nationally, the unemployment situation has shown steady improvement since last fall. In September, Statistics Canada reported a seasonally adjusted unem-

Nitinat sinking

The treacherous Nitinat Gap on the west coast of Vancouver Island claimed at least one more victim on Monday.

A spokesman for the RCMP detachment at Lake Cowichan said boaters reported seeing a 24-foot American power boat sink while crossing the Nitinat Bar about 4 p.m.

The search was continuing today. It is not known how many people were aboard the boat when it sank.

B.C. set for Skylab

There is a less than a one per cent chance Skylab will fall on B.C., but if it does the Provincial Emergency Program is ready.

Provincial director Robert Neale said today that B.C., like all provinces has established a liaison with Ottawa, which in turn is in close contact with NORAD and NASA.

Locally both federal and provincial officials are working out of the emergency program headquarters in Esquimalt.

A helicopter will be standing by at the adjacent Esquimalt high school and the minute word is received that any pieces of skylab will hit B.C. the helicopter and a special team will be dispatched to the scene to take whatever action is necessary, Neale said.

Quick action is important because there will be two hours or less notice on where pieces of the disintegrating space vehicle will land on earth. Re-entry is expected some time Wednesday.

The Victoria headquarters is receiving hourly bulletins from Ottawa.

Murder, beach party link?

Two Sooke sisters found stabbed to death southeast of Gold River early Saturday morning may have attended a large beach party near Campbell River earlier in the evening, RCMP said today.

Sgt. Ellis Peleskey said there is some suggestion Christine Beatrice Thomas, 26, and her sister Helena Rose Howard, 16, both of 1939 Powliuk Crescent, stopped to join a large group of youths partying at McIvor Lake, about 16 kilometres west of Campbell River on the Gold River road.

Peleskey said the sisters apparently left Sooke early Friday and were hitchhiking to Gold River to visit their family.

He said officers have managed to track down numerous motorists who gave the pair lifts as far as Campbell River.

But beyond that point investigators have drawn a blank.

Peleskey said officers are now trying to locate youths who were at the party at McIvor Lake to determine if the sisters did attend.

The bodies were found by a couple of Port Alberni fishermen on the Elk River Timber logging road,

Gold River coroner Norman Paulson said today both women appeared to have been stabbed numerous times in the back, chest, neck and face and time of death was established as about midnight.

Paulson said there was hardly any blood at the scene, indicating the two had been killed elsewhere. There was no sign of a struggle. He declined comment on whether officers have found a weapon.

The sisters were fully clothed and there was no evidence of sexual assault.

The two were originally from the Port Alberni area.

The family moved to Victoria in 1967 and to Gold River in 1970.

Mrs. Thomas, who was married in 1974 and was divorced from her husband, Harvey, on June 28, had lived in Sooke only a short time. Helena joined her about a month ago.

Paulson said the family has more than its share of tragedy in recent years. The sisters' mother died in 1973; one brother was killed in a motor vehicle mishap and another committed suicide. Their father, Ambrose, 72, lives on the Mowachaht Indian reserve southwest of Gold River.

A brush with disaster

Two-year-old Ray J. really put his foot in it this morning.

And it has cost his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Jacquot, 1309 Brillaman, a new vacuum cleaner.

Mrs. Jacquot was doing a little housecleaning and went outside to empty the vacuum cleaner bag.

When she came back, she found Ray J. had somehow managed to jam his foot inside the machine.

He sat there hollering.

Unable to free him, she called the Saanich fire department.

Firemen tried soap and gentle persuasion. Both failed. Ray J.'s cries got louder.

Firemen finally used a hacksaw to open the vacuum casing.

A spokesman said Ray J. wasn't half as relieved as his mother.

Canada oil hike to U.S.?

Times News Services

BOSTON — President Jimmy Carter soon will announce that the United States has completed negotiations with Mexico and Canada for increased shipments of crude oil to ease the fuel shortage, the Boston Globe reported today.

The U.S. president reportedly told some officials attending the domestic summit at Camp David, Md., on Monday that the additional oil from Canada and Mexico would help counter the home heating oil crunch expected this winter.

Details of the negotiations, or how much of an increase in oil the United States would get from the two countries, were not reported.

The Globe said that during the first three months of this year Mexico supplied this country with 451,000 barrels of oil a day and Canada provided 548,000 a day.

The Globe also said Carter is expected to propose an energy mobilization board that could move quickly on new energy projects, a costly federal program for the development of synthetic fuels, and postponement of federal environmental goals that would, for example, allow utilities to burn coal.

Meanwhile, in Washington today Deputy Energy Secretary John O'Leary, the No. 2 man in the beleaguered Department of Energy, has sent a letter of resignation t Carter, effective Sept. 4.

O'Leary told CBS that quitting was his own idea. "I'm just plain dead tired," O'Leary said.

Strikes could block forest voting

Some union locals threw a wrench into the forest industry's contract ratification procedure Monday as the province's 41,000 wood and pulp workers began voting on proposed two-year contracts that the industry has called the richest ever.

Eighty members of the Canadian Paperworkers Union Local 402 at the Finlay Forest Industries pulp mill at Mackenzie in north-central B.C. voted 93 per cent in favor of turning their 24-hour study session into an official strike.

A spokesman for the local said the strike could block ratification votes by other forestry unions which now are under way. The union's negotiating committee has recommended the 7,500 members accept the contract pending settlement of local issues.

A spokesman for Finlay Forest Industries said today the strike is being viewed as legal and no company action is planned at this time. He said the pulp mill is completely shut down but so far no picket-line has appeared at the plant.

Twenty-five members of Local 1092 at the B.C. Forest Products mill in Mackenzie are on strike over the same issues bothering the Finlay workers, a portion of the proposed contract dealing with allowances for isolated living conditions.

And 70 workers at Prince George Pulp and Paper and Intercontinental Pulp, both in Prince George, walked off the job to protest what they say is a lack of compensation for shift workers.

Meanwhile, results of the ratification vote by 28,000 coastal region members of the International Woodworkers of America are expected in about two weeks.

Wildcat strikes by woodworkers continued Monday although their union has recommended acceptance of the proposed pact. About 3,000 woodworkers were off the job at MacMillan Bloedel operations in the Port Alberni area.

Talks aimed at reaching a tentative agreement for 8,000 woodworkers in B.C.'s southern interior were expected to wrap up Wednesday.

The forest industry has sent pamphlets describing the contract offer to the 5,500-member Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada whose executive has recommended rejection. Voting results were expected late Thursday.

The companies have offered a wage increase of 90 cents an hour this year and 9.5 per cent next year in an agreement which would include additional pension benefits and credits. The base rate in the forest industry when contracts expired last month was $8.16 an hour.

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market fell sharply in active trading today.

Declines outnumbered advances 218 to 146 with 226 issues unchanged.

Trading resumed in Cenex Ltd. at 1 p.m. following a halt last Friday.

The company said negotiations for a $1.36-million loan are in progress and conditional commitments have been made for $400,000.

The funds will be placed in escrow with a court in Saskatchewan to enable release of a mechanics lien claim placed against Cenex by Mining Corp. of Canada Ltd. Cenex's stock fell five cents to $2.00 by shortly after 1 p.m.

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices were mixed in light-to-moderate trading on the Montreal Stock Exchange today.

Decision to move 'understandable'

MONTREAL (CP) — The decision of Pratt and Whitney Aircraft of Canada Ltd. to move part of its engineering department to Toronto from Montreal is understandable in light of the predominance of the English language in the international aviation industry, says the president of the Quebec Order of Engineers.

"Aerospace technology is essentially English throughout the world," Micheline Bouchard said in an interview. "Even the Russians learn English to be able to read American and British technical publications."

The aerospace industry is highly competitive, she said, and favorable conditions must exist if Quebec wishes to retain it.

"Without trying to politicize the debate, it is necessary to have your feet on the ground and recognize the facts," Mrs. Bouchard said.

Pratt and Whitney, an engine manufacturer located in the Montreal suburb of Longueil, recently announced that, of 400 engineering jobs to be created in Toronto, 200 would be filled by employees now working in Montreal.

The company's president, Donald Lowe, said the move was a "humanitarian gesture" to employees.
